15 Practical Nurses To Receive Diplomas

Fifteen practical nursing students will be graduated Aug. 14 at 8 p.m. at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

The nurses have completed a one-year course at the school and will receive diplomas and pins at the exercises.

Dr. Robert Warner, chief resident physician at the Salt Lake General Hospital, will be the principal speaker. The diplomas will be awarded by Mrs. Dorothy Lowman, director of nurses at the hospital. Mrs. Shirley Collins, course director, will present the pins.

A brief welcoming address will be given by Cecil Samuelson, supervisor of the day program of the school.

The graduates are Miss Marie Osguthorpe, Miss Beth Gehrke, Mrs. Evelyn V. Hurd, Mrs. Lyle J. Williams, Mrs. Lillian Fife, Mrs. Eva B. Nolasco, Mrs. Jane B. Morrison, and Miss Vadis Clark, all of Salt Lake City; Miss Melba RaNae Anderson, Kaneshville, Utah; Miss Alice Spader, Tooele; Mrs. Dorothy L. Jackson, Heart, Ark.; Mrs. Helen Bryan, Salina; Mrs. Allie Dunn, Murray; Mrs. Eunice Cullimore, Provo, and Mrs. Lorene M. Parrish, Centerville.

The graduates completed nursing theory classes at the school and received clinical and practical experience at the Salt Lake General Hospital. They are now eligible to take a state practical nurses licensing examination.

The class is the seventh to be graduated from the school. The course was started four years ago. There were 79 students in the six previous classes. The next class will begin Sept. 2. Applications are now being accepted, school officials said.

Doctor Honors Nurse Class

Practical nurses can render valuable service to their community, Dr. Robert Warner, chief resident in medicine, Salt Lake General Hospital, told 15 graduates of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School's practical nursing course Friday night.

Speaking to the August graduating class in the school auditorium, 431-6th East, Dr. Warner said: "I hope you realize that now you are in a unique position to supply a much-needed service to your community and that you will gain much satisfaction from doing a job well."

He noted that practical nurses have done a great deal in the past year in Salt Lake City to ease the shortage of registered nurses.

Following Dr. Warner's address, Mrs. Helen E. Bryan, class president, presented the school with the class gift. Mrs. Shirley Collins, director of the practical nursing school, presented the graduates, and Mrs. Dorothy Lowman, director of nursing at General Hospital, awarded the diplomas.

Practical Nursing Importance Stressed to Graduating Class

Importance of the service practical nurses can render their community was emphasized Friday night before 15 women who were graduated from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School's practical nursing course.

The commencement speaker was Dr. Robert Warner, chief resident in medicine, Salt Lake General Hospital.

He addressed the August graduating class in the school auditorium, 431-6th East.

"I hope you realize that now you are in a unique position to supply a much-needed service to your community and that you will gain much satisfaction from doing a job well," said Dr. Warner.

S. L. Instructor Announces Demo Candidacy

Wallace G. Burt, electrical instructor, Salt Lake Area Vocational School, Sunday had announced his candidacy for Democratic state representative from the Eighth Legislative District.

During World War II Mr. Burt served four years with the Navy Department as an electrician at Pearl Harbor Navy Yard, and 18 months as an information specialist in the United States Army.

Educated in Salt Lake City schools, Mr. Burt attended South High School and was graduated from the University of Utah school of education as an economics major.

Mr. Burt says he is neither conservative nor liberal, but favors legislation designed to bring benefit to the greatest number of people. Wise legislation lies somewhere between wasteful extravagance and false economy, he declared.

A life-long resident of Sugar House, Mr. Burt is single and resides with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Burt, at 2120 South Tenth East St.

Vocational School Dates Opening

Salt Lake Area Vocational School will begin its 1952-53 fall term on Sept. 8, Jay L. Nelson, president, said Monday.

Registration for day classes will begin Sept. 1 and for night classes on Sept. 8, Mr. Nelson said. Daytime classes will be conducted from 8:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. and evening school hours are from 7 to 10 p.m. two nights a week.

The facilities of the school, Mr. Nelson noted, are planned to meet the needs of three main groups of people:

1. Persons who can qualify for pre-employment training with the aim of actually entering an apprenticeship upon completion of their school program.
2. Persons who need related training to supplement regular apprenticeships in which they are currently engaged.
3. Journeymen who want trade extension training to promote their growth in an occupation for which they are already prepared.

Vocation School Expects Top Roll

Record enrollment is expected at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School when day classes begin Wednesday, Sept. 10, and evening classes commence Monday, Sept. 15.

Jay L. Nelson, president, announced Saturday that applicants may register from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. beginning Monday or until noon on Saturdays.

Day school training is available in 17 trades, Mr. Nelson said.

Korean veterans with a minimum of 90 days service are eligible for training at government expense. Interested veterans should apply at the Veterans Administration, 1710 S. Redwood Rd. Discharge papers, marriage certificates and birth certificates of children will be required by the V. A.

Cecil O. Samuelson, day school supervisor, announced that last year 602 were trained in preparatory classes. More than 1,000 attended evening school, according to Lloyd V. Tilt, supervisor. These evening courses are designed to provide technical training for those in apprenticeships, it was said.

The Salt Lake Area Vocational School is a state-supported trade technical institute established to serve the immediate area and the state at large. Anyone over 16 years of age may attend and high school credit may be earned by arrangement with local school districts, Mr. Nelson concluded.

32,416 in Utah Attend Job Classes

Utah residents took greater than usual advantage of the state's vocational education program during the past year, Mark Nichols, state director of vocational education, indicated in a report released Wednesday.

According to the report, nearly 1,600 more people attended vocational classes in the state during 1951-52 than during the previous year.

Classes were attended by 32,416 persons made up of 19,955 adults and 12,461 youths. Approximately 15,000 of the trainees were male and 17,000 female.

The vocational education classes for youth are taught in 57 high schools in Utah, two area vocational schools are three junior colleges. Some adult vocational classes are taught in every part of the state either by resident or itinerant instructors.

A breakdown of divisional enrollments given in the report was as follows:

Vocational agriculture, 5,852; distributive education, 3,047; home economics, 17,356, and trade and industrial, 6,361.

Enrollment on the opening of day classes at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School Wednesday totaled about 291 students.

Jay L. Nelson, president of the school, said this was about 25 more than had enrolled at the same time last year. This year's enrollment in the day school is expected to go to about 300, he said.

Registration for evening classes to date numbers 340, and is expected to jump to 450. Evening classes begin next Monday night.

Mr. Nelson noted that 16 Korean veterans are enrolled in the program. There are also about 25 state rehabilitation students, approximately 65 high school students who attend by special arrangement with their high school principals, and 54 veterans of World War II.

Students from 16 to 60 years of age are attending classes at the school, Mr. Nelson said. He pointed out that persons may register throughout the year for either day or evening classes.

In other action taken this week, the Area Board of Control also authorized the issuance of a vocational scholarship, to be awarded next spring to each high school in the area. They will be available to industrial arts graduates and homemaking graduates.

Jay L. Nelson, school president, said Thursday that 649 students are now receiving trade training at the school.

Of this number, 276 are registered in the daytime preparatory program, and 373 are receiving related instruction in the evening school. There are 95 high school students enrolled in the 15-day program, as well as 19 Korean veterans, 47 World War II veterans and 34 rehabilitation students.

Additional Instruction

Mr. Nelson said that a recent spot survey of the 1951-52 evening school students disclosed that approximately 50 per cent of those enrolled at the end of school last year have returned for additional instruction. Of the 50 per cent not returning, the majority feel that they have accomplished their training objectives.

Ninety per cent of the evening enrollment is working at the trade, or at a closely allied trade in which they are receiving instruction.

The president also reported that the 372 enrollment in the evening program is slightly below that of enrollment figures of 408 for the same period a year ago.

He explained that the decline is "undoubtedly due in part to the expiration of entitlement of World War II veterans." Last year there were 244 evening veterans, as compared with 137 this year. In the day program there were 123 veterans last year, compared with 47 this year, he said.

Mother-Girl Duo Study Together

When dad does junior's homework and the answers are wrong, it is a big joke. But when Mrs. Thora Barr helps daughter Nettie with her homework, the answers must be right or both mother and daughter fail the class. You see, Mrs. Barr and Nettie are both currently enrolled in the practical nursing class at Salt Lake Area Vocational School. They are members of the school's first mother-daughter team, and according to school officials, "both are doing very good work." Mrs. Barr explains that she has always wanted to be a nurse, and now that her children are nearly grown she finally has time to fulfill this desire.

Nettie, also interested in nursing since she was a small girl, says she thinks it offers her an excellent background for marriage and motherhood.

"Besides," she says, "I want to be prepared just in case I may some day have to be the breadwinner."

Mrs. Barr and Nettie enrolled in the practical nursing class in September. By February they will have completed their classroom work and will go into a hospital for further training. They are scheduled to graduate next August.

Nettie, who is 18, resides with her mother, her father, John B. Barr, and her three brothers at 2480-5th East St.

THREE NEW COURSES ADDED FOR VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

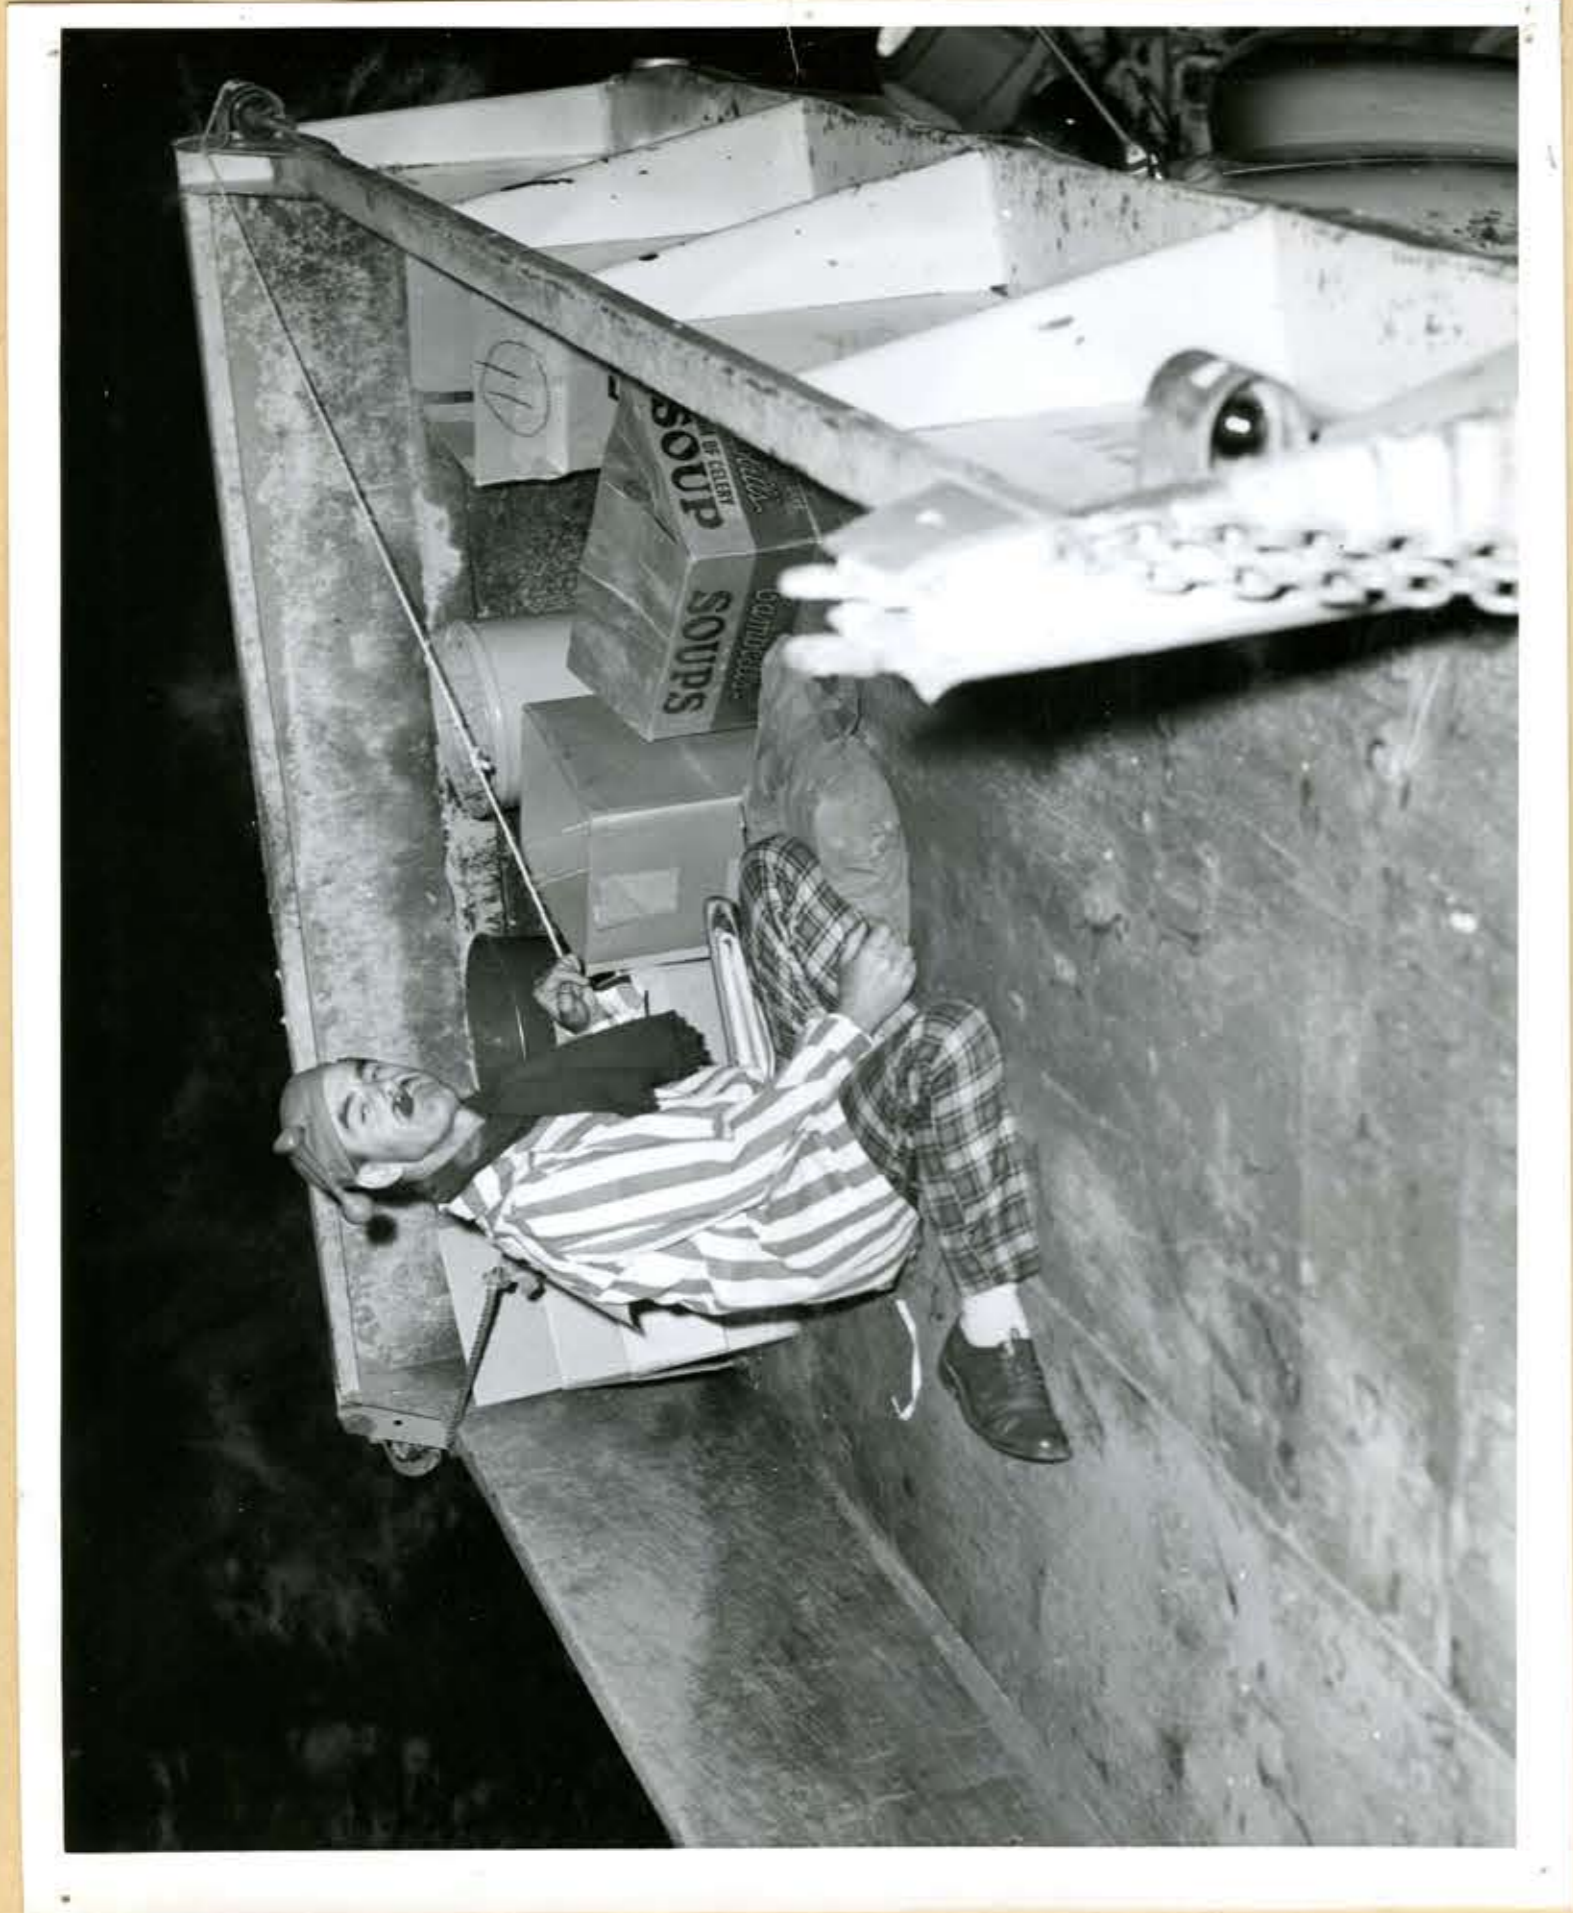

Three new courses will be added to the Salt Lake Area Vocational School program, it was announced Wednesday following the monthly meeting of the institution's board of control.

The new trade-training classes will be in waitress training, fireman instructor training and structural iron work, according to Jay L. Nelson, school president.

The board also authorized granting of vocational scholarships to be awarded next spring to each high school in the area. The scholarships will be available to industrial arts and homemaking graduates.

The structural iron workers class is scheduled to begin immediately. The other two will commence Dec. 1.

Current registration at the school is 649 students, Mr. Nelson said.

Skill Shortage Seen in Utah

D NEWS 11-21-52

A lack of skilled workers is the most serious shortage in Utah's basic industries, Joseph Rosenblatt, president and manager of Emco Corporation, told a group of vocational education administrators and guidance counselors at the Capitol Friday afternoon.

"Emco Corporation and other basic industries in the area can absorb all the trained workers that trade and industrial education can provide," he said. Most needed at present are layout men, machinists, welders, pattern makers and foundry men, he added.

The meeting was the second in a series of conferences with leading industrialists to more closely co-ordinate vocational training with the needs of industry. Van H. Robertson, state director, division of trade and industrial education, is conducting the meetings.

Trends Point to 'Blue Collar' Jobs, Says Vocation Chief

TRIBUNE 12-10-52

CEDAR CITY (Special)—Most of the young men in Utah and the United States today are headed for "blue collar" instead of "white collar" jobs if industrial trends continue, declared Jay L. Nelson, president of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, here Tuesday.

Appearing before members of Cedar City Rotary Club at their luncheon meeting, Mr. Nelson was principal speaker at a special vocational service program under direction of Royce Knight. Mr. Nelson was introduced by Roy Walters, former Cedar City resident who now is connected with the Salt Lake school.

Mr. Nelson presented statistics showing that 53 per cent of all gainfully employed persons in the United States earn a livelihood in trades and industrial occupations, with other means divided 8 per cent in professions, 22 per cent in business and 17 per cent in agriculture. Figures for Utah are strikingly parallel to those of the nation's, with 1 per cent more in the professions, 8 per cent less in business, and the difference divided about equally among agriculture, industry and trades.

In contrast, Mr. Nelson pointed out, there are approximately 18,000 persons enrolled in Utah colleges and universities compared to only 2,500 in vocational trades courses, in national departments at the various colleges.

"Utah is bound to become more and more industrialized, but almost daily the state is losing additional industry to other states because of the lack of reservoir of skilled workers in the state," Mr. Nelson declared.

All information available points conclusively to the great need for additional vocational education training in Utah to provide this reservoir, if we are to attract industry as rapidly as we should like, he added.

To supplement his remarks, Mr. Nelson assisted by Mr. Walters presented color slides depicting present opportunities for the training of skilled workmen already existing in Utah.

SPEAKER FOR WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3rd:

Speaker at the regular luncheon meeting of Bonneville Kiwanis, Wednesday, December 3rd, will be Jay L. Nelson, president of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. Mr. Nelson has had a colorful background, being a graduate of Brigham Young University and the University of Southern California, and having taught at the University of Utah. The destiny of the Vocational School has been somewhat of a political football, with appropriations for the school vetoed as a result of gubernatorial action sometime ago. The Vocational School as such is still continuing to exist and will undoubtedly come up for heated discussion during the forthcoming session of the state legislature. Mr. Nelson will be introduced by Kiwanian Roger Freund. This meeting promises to provide a most interesting discussion for all present, so plan now to attend.

Mr. Ashton, author of three books, advertising executive, former editor and sports writer, gave Bonneville members a very interesting and inspirational talk last Wednesday. Everyone present, momentarily at least, forgot the pressures of everyday business while listening to Mr. Ashton's choice of an "All American Eleven." It was suggested at this time of year when we are all thinking of three things -- football, food and gratitude. Wendell presented his combination of eleven "All Americans," starting with George Washington. As the names were presented with justification for their choice, a deep feeling of appreciation for these persons and for America was keenly sensed by all in attendance. The accomplished Mr. Ashton was ably introduced by Kiwanian Peirce Brady of Zion's Securities Corporation. The introduction was so complete that the speaker commented that Peirce had neglected only one thing -- the names of the pall bearers. Thanks, Wendell, come again soon!

REQUESTS FROM MARV:

Bonneville members are continually asking Secretary Marv Nell for help, and now he needs ours. Please check the following:

1. Framed membership certificates are gathering dust in Marv's office. These are too large to mail, and new members are requested to pick their own certificates up at 68 South Main, Room #226.
2. Check your name and address listing on the back of the Newsletter and advise Marv's office of any mistakes or changes.
3. Some pictures are still missing. These are needed for the new roster that goes to press for January mailing, as well as for Newsletter files. Please, all members who have not already done so, have a 3x5 glossy photo in Marv's hands immediately. This is urgent!

If you are in doubt as to your status regarding the three above requests, call Marv or his secretary Iris at 4-6747. And, please, do it now!

BLOOD BANK SIDELIGHT:

The Red Cross Blood Center reports that due to some error President Pomeroy's pint of blood, which was given last week, was tabulated as "normal" blood. They are now requesting that Bonneville Kiwanis make up this deficit. This is Dr. Pres Burnham's way of saying that the blood center needs our "full-hearted" support. President Pom was unable to be with us at last Wednesday's meeting, which is an unusual happening; President-elect Bob Cranmer did an excellent job of conducting, and those who were absent should ask him about the bus to Petaluma.

NEWSLETTER NOTES:

Bob Walden, the Goodyear Tire expert, has agreed to help Newsletter meet the deadline each week. This will certainly improve the readability of Newsletter. Again, may we suggest you can Bob at 3-4556 or Gus at 9-8771 with suggestions for inserts. Thanks. ... Nick Morgan was welcomed back into the fold after a victorious campaign. ... Rick Lamoreaux reports our District Governor-elect Dr. Ernest D. Hunsaker and his wife are recuperating from a serious auto accident. Our best wishes, Dr. and Mrs. Hunsaker for a speedy recovery.

AN APPRECIATED GESTURE:

Bonneville member John Fairbanks, account executive with Stevens-Davis Company, dropped Dick Cahoon a note asking to be excused from several Bonneville Kiwanis meetings. The card was mailed from New York, and John reports he has been to Los Angeles, San Francisco, Canada, Chicago, Albany, New York, Baltimore, Washington D.C., and then back home. Thanks, John, and let's all endeavor to keep Bonneville posted as to our whereabouts.

WELCOME, BOB LOWEN:

Robert S. Lowen was welcomed into Bonneville Kiwanis November 26th. Bob was introduced by Max Caldwell, Agent for Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. Mr. Lowen is vice president of Skaggs Drug Stores, and comes to us from the sunny part of California -- Pasadena. Bob, with his wife Helen and two-year-old daughter, Margaret Ann, is making his home at 1962 Princeton Avenue. Welcome to Bonneville, Bob. We'll be looking for you every Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. in the Bonneville Room at the Hotel Newhouse. And, Secretary Marv requests that you have your picture taken as soon as possible for the Roster and turn in 3x5 glossy print to him. Thanks!

Vocation School Explains Need For More Money

Reasons why $444,975 is asked to operate the Salt Lake Area Vocational School during the 1953-55 biennium were outlined for 55 Utah legislators when they inspected the school Wednesday night.

Lincoln F. Hanks, chairman of finance and public relations committee for the school's area board of control, emphasized the need for additional equipment at the institution. He said that the state has purchased less than $80,000 worth of equipment for the school.

Dr. Irvin S. Noall, director of industrial arts, Salt Lake City school district, urged the legislature to "appropriate sufficient money to the institution to do an adequate job."

Two Millions Added To 'U' and 'A' Funds

Utah Solons Increase Educational Budgets

Utah Legislature's all-important purse-string committee Saturday boosted tentative 1953-55 budgets of the University of Utah and Utah State Agricultural College each approximately $1,000,000.

The increases are expected to be included in an appropriations bill to be written over the week end. Named Saturday to draft the bill were Sen. Dilworth S. Woolley (R., Salt Lake), Rep. Lawrence B. Johnson (R., Randolph) and Louis H. Lloyd, director the Utah Legislative Council.

Sen. Alonzo F. Hopkin (D., Croydon), chairman of the subcommittee which worked out the U of U and USAC budgets for the joint appropriations committee, declared the governor's proposal to reduce the institutions' budgets was "entirely unjustified."

Lee Asks Cut
The governor had asked that the new budgets of the schools be set at about one-half million dollars below the 1951-53 figures.

The appropriations committee set figures Saturday for both institutions at approximately 10 per cent above the present bid budgets—but 10 per cent below the institutions' requests.

Tentatively budgeted Saturday were these amounts:
University of Utah — total, $6,400,000 including $5,600,000 for administration, $775,000 for the college of medicine and $25,000 for the U. of U mineralogical and geological survey.

Administration costs of the present biennium were $5,149,475. The university asked for $6,249,475 for the next two years but Gov. Lee recommended only $4,592,000. Medical college costs for the past two years are estimated at $700,000. The total of $822,186 was requested for 1953-55. But the governor recommended $750,000.

Public school administration drew criticism as the committee considered appropriations for this agency Saturday. Rep. Welby Young (R., Heber City), said investigation had disclosed that many school boards in the state are complaining about state department of education supervision's being "irritating and distracting."

Refuses Request

The committee refused to grant $374,206 requested for a new 5 per cent cost of living salary increase for U. of U. teachers during the coming biennium. It also knocked off from the university request $68,730 for installation of utilities in new buildings, $30,000 to raise the ceiling of the faculty annuity system, $65,000 for merit salary adjustments and $31,774 for new instructors.

Utah State Agricultural College—total, $4,725,000, including $3,400,000 for administration; $550,000 for the extension division, and $775,000 for the agricultural experiment station.

USA C's appropriation for administration during the present period was $2,905,423. The college asked for $3,888,730 for the next two years but Gov. Lee recommended only $2,500,000. USA C's extension division operated on $482,444 during the present biennium and asked for an increase to $621,600 for the next two years. Gov. recommended $415,000.

The experiment station appropriations for the present biennium were $712,000. A total of $898,500 was requested for the next two years. Gov. Lee recommended only $636,000.

Maintains Living Hike

Rep. Jere L. Jones (R., Salt Lake), said the U. of U. budget accepted by the committee provides for $170,000 to maintain the 5 per cent cost of living increase granted last July to employees, $169,220 to offset anticipated declines in veterans' fees and $48,070 to meet expected increases in supply costs.

The USAC budget provides $78,000 to continue a similar cost of living salary increase, $420,000 to offset declining veteran's fees and $53,000 for increased supply costs.

Recommends Reduction

Mr. Lloyd volunteered that the state's 60-man School Survey Commission, which is to report to a joint session next Thursday, is recommending that the Department of Education be reduced from 15 to four divisions.

Tentatively approved Saturday were these budget amounts: capitol building and grounds, $305,966; Snow College, $245,000; Branch Agricultural College, $425,000; Central Utah Vocational School, $300,000; Salt Lake Area Vocational School, $300,000; State Deaf and Blind School, $405,000; state insurance fund $256,792.

School Schedules Session Boosting Vocation Class

Advantages of the vocational educational program will be outlined to school officials of six districts Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. during a conference at the Salt Lake Vocational School, 4th South and 6th East.

The meeting will be for all administrators, superintendents, high school principals, board of education members and teachers of vocational programs in the Salt Lake, Davis, Granite, Jordan, Park City and South Summit districts.

The conference will be split into five divisions. These divisions and the State Department of Education directors who will preside are: trade and industrial, Vaughan H. Robertson; business and distributive education, Hal Cheney; home making, Allene Erickson; guidance services, Dr. Vernon F. Larson, and agriculture, Elvin Downs.

Grant M. Burbidge, commissioner of the area board of control of the Salt Lake Vocational School, will speak to the entire group on "Are Our Vocational Programs Meeting the Needs of Our Community." Approximately 200 educators are expected to attend the conference.

Trade Schools Far Short, Districts Told

Grant M. Burbidge, commissioner of the area board of control of Salt Lake Vocational School, Tuesday evening told officials of six school districts that training for trades and industries in this area was merely "scratching the surface."

Speaking to more than 200 educators from Salt Lake, Davis, Granite, Jordan, Park City and South Summit School Districts, Mr. Burbidge said:

"Within the next 10 years, some 75,000 students in this area will finish school. At best, we can expect to provide training for only about 10 per cent of this number unless our facilities are greatly expanded and improved."

Other speakers at the ninth and final regional vocational conference held at the vocational school were Dr. E. Allen Bateman, state superintendent of public instruction; Allan M. West, executive secretary of Utah Education Assn.; Dr. Orvil Starle, representing Wasatch Chemical Co., and Miss Mary Jane Brennan, regional home economist, Wheat and Flour Institute, Chicago.

THORNTON PIPE

Lee Receives Souvenir of Election Bet

Gov. J. Bracken Lee Saturday received a handsome memento of the recent visit of Colorado Gov. Dan Thornton to sweep out his office.

It was a replica—in duro-aluminum—of the "pipe" Gov. Lee presented to Gov. Thornton on his arrival to pay off an election bet by sweeping out Gov. Lee's office.

Gov. Thornton is seldom seen without a pipe in his mouth, so a pipe was considered a suitable gift—only the "pipe" was fashioned from a broom and a garbage can.

The replica was presented by Jay L. Nelson, president of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. Designed by W. E. LaPearle and T. Burdell Tenney, instructors at the school, it was turned out by students in the machine shop.

Alongside the "pipe" is a plaque in the shape of the map of Utah on which is an inscription: "Gov. J. Bracken Lee from Salt Lake Area Vocational School."

Food Hostess Class Slated

Training young women to "make mealtime a pleasure" is the object of a food hostess class scheduled to begin Monday at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, Jay L. Nelson, school president, announced Saturday.

The class is being reactivated at the request of Utah State Restaurant Assn., following a recently completed survey indicating a critical shortage of restaurant service employes in the area.

The six-week class, scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, will offer instruction in table setting, serving, menu study, development of job skills, personal appearance, salesmanship and working relationships. Persons interested may register at the school between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., beginning Friday.

Mrs. Anne Hogg, 251-4th East, a veteran of 20 years in the food industry, has been named instructor in the day school trade preparatory program. She is a former employe of the Ambassador Club, Hotel Utah and the Hot Shoppes.

Members of the advisory committee who have assisted the school in establishing the program include: A. Allan Coombs, manager, Beau Brummel Restaurant; Mrs. Eva J. Simmons, catering manager, Temple Square Hotel; Jerry M. Clark, manager, Hot Shoppes; Mrs. Charles L. Evans, manager, Evans Restaurant; and Mrs. Eva Wade, manager, Fred and Kelly's Restaurant and Drive Inn.

Keep Out Federal Controls, Lumber Leader Pleads

Full co-operation of the lumber industry in avoiding a "return to government price and credit controls" was asked Thursday by Lincoln F. Hanks, president, Intermountain Lumber Dealers Assn.

Mr. Hanks was the keynote speaker at the opening of the association's 10th annual convention in Hotel Utah. Registration of delegates from Utah, Nevada, Wyoming and Idaho started at 10 a.m. The first business session opened at 2 p.m.

"When people in business become accustomed to government controls, they sometimes forget the art of self control," said Mr. Hanks in his annual address. "Men in business and industry have a great challenge to help keep our economy stable."

Mr. Hanks said he did not expect increases in prices in the lumber industry, nor did he expect prices to decline. He pointed out the "supply and demand seems to be keeping pace with one another."

The program opened with music by the West High School a cappella choir. A film was shown on "How to Display for Profits."

William Winter, noted news commentator from San Francisco, told the group that America has been pushed by history into world leadership since World War II.

He said the biggest problem facing the United States is the one of communism. He said America has been forced to design a pattern for the people of the world.

"The challenge of communism is the most severe because you can't fight that with armies," he said. "That's a selling job."

Members attended a "Hoo-Hoo" dinner Thursday evening in Newhouse Hotel. The Friday program will open in Hotel Utah with a luncheon at 12:15 p.m.

News Commentator Tops Lumber Meet Speakers

Delegates to the 10th annual convention of the Intermountain Lumber Dealers Assn., which opens Thursday at 2 p.m. in Hotel Utah, were arriving here Wednesday from various parts of Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and Nevada.

Registration of the expected 1,000 lumbermen and their wives will be from 10 a.m. to noon, said Lincoln F. Hanks, Salt Lake City, association president.

Meanwhile, carpenters were banging away Wednesday afternoon, "building" exhibits on the hotel's mezzanine. The exhibits show the latest in home-building.

First Session Speaker

William Winter, San Francisco, noted news commentator, will be one of the principal speakers at the first business session at 2 p.m. His subject will be "The Truth Behind the Headlines."

Mr. Hanks will deliver his annual address. A film will be shown on "How to Display for Profits." Entertainment and dinner will be held in the Newhouse Hotel at 5:30 p.m.

The Friday program will feature a luncheon session at 12:15 p.m. in Hotel Utah. Reports will be made, including one by the nominating committee. A ladies' luncheon will be held on the hotel roof garden.

President's Reception

A president's reception will be held Friday from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Newhouse Hotel. The third and final business meeting will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. in Hotel Utah. Principal speaker will be Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, treasurer of the United States.

The new officers will be introduced. A banquet at 7 p.m., followed by a dance, will conclude the convention.

Lincoln F. Hanks . . . Will be in charge of lumber meeting.

About our New "Food Hostess" Class

SALT LAKE VOCATIONAL SCHOOL
MAR 6 1953

In several of our bulletins we have told you about the ground-work being done to get our Salt Lake Vocational School to start a waitress training course. At last we have been successful in accomplishing this and in our last bulletin we told you that the class would start March 2. Your Association paid for an ad that was run in the Tribune and the Deseret News-Telegram announcing the class and soliciting enrollment. We also worked with the Radio Stations to get some announcements. The Vocational School even got it on T-V.

At this point, we want to thank Mr. Jay Nelson of the Vocational School, your President, A. Allen Coombs, Mrs. Evans of the Evans Cafe, Jerry Clark of the Hot Shoppes, Eva Simmons of the Temple Square Hotel, and Eva Wade of Fred and Kelleys for their wonderful support and help in getting this program started.

However, we do not have a full class registered, and WE MUST MAKE THIS PROGRAM SUCCESSFUL NOW, if we are to have the continued benefit of additional classes. The course runs six weeks - five days a week, and the price is only $25. Where can you spend a better $25 than to train one of your own employees?

One operator, who has the foresight to see the possibilities of this educational program, is the PRONTO DRIVE-IN. They have sent two girls to take the course, letting them take an evening shift plus Saturday and Sunday. These girls are experienced waitresses, yet they were amazed - in just two days - to learn just how much they didn't know. Other operators have admitted that some of their oldest girls in point of service are the worst offenders in doing things that should not be done.

KNOCK KNOCK KNOCK
OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS BUT ONCE!! We are, therefore asking that every one of our members sponsor a girl, one of your own girls, if you don't know of a new girl who wants to be prepared for a well-paying vocation. You can make arrangements the same as PRONTO DRIVE-IN. LET'S FLOOD THE SCHOOL WITH APPLICANTS, BECAUSE YOU WILL BE THE WINNER IF YOU HAVE ONE OF THESE TRAINED FOOD HOSTESSES.

THIS IS URGENT. You asked for this course, so you could get trained help. The entire State needs a reputation for better restaurant service. LET'S MAKE EATING OUT IN UTAH A PLEASURE. It's up to YOU. (Incidentally, other States are watching us and they are making inquiries about this program. Can you afford to be less interested?) Call Mr. Jay Nelson or Ann Hogg at the Vocational School, 431 So. 6th East, Salt Lake City. - Phone 3-4594. Girls can still get in this class, if they register immediately.

GOOD FOOD, WELL SERVED—Mrs. Anne Hogg, instructor in food hostess training at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, demonstrates proper food service to A. Allan Coombs and Jay L. Nelson.

S. L. School to Train New Food Hostesses

Food is necessary. But whether it is a necessary evil or a pleasure to partake depends a lot on the person preparing and serving it.

Training young women who are of a mind to make mealtime a pleasure is the object of a food hostess class scheduled to begin Monday at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

Follows Survey
According to Jay L. Nelson, vocational school president, the class is being reactivated at the request of the Utah State Restaurant Assn. following their survey which showed a critical shortage of restaurant service employes in the area.

Classes in table setting, serving, menu study, developing job skill, personal appearance, salesmanship, working relationships, and job application will be held Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. at the school, 431-6th East. Persons interested may register at the school between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. beginning Friday.

A. Allan Coombs, president
Mrs. Anne Hogg, 251-4th East, has been named instructor in the day school trade preparatory program. Mrs. Hogg, a veteran of 20 years in the food industry, is a former employe of the Ambassador Club, the Hotel Utah, and the Hot Shoppes. Members of the Advisory Committee who have assisted the school in establishing the program include: A. Allan Coombs, manager of the Beau Brummel Restaurant; Mrs. Eva J. Simmons, catering manager of the Hotel Temple Square; Jerry M. Clark, manager of the Hot Shoppes; Mrs. Charles L. Evans, manager of Evans' Restaurant; Mrs. Eva Wade, manager of Fred and Kelley's.

Better start making your plans to attend the National Restaurant Association meeting to be held in Chicago at the Navy Pier, May 11-15.

This is their 34th annual show. The entire show will house 750 booths, exceeding last year by 75 booths. The promise this to be the biggest and best convention ever, and expect 25,000 restaurateurs to attend.

If you plan to attend, please notify this office so we can advise other members who will be going from Utah. In the past some of our Associate members have extended invitations to members to attend certain social functions while at the Convention. Please register with us, so you won't be overlooked, if invitations come our way.

PANCAKE DAYS

There is nothing more luscious for breakfast, and nothing more profitable than pancakes. Feb. 17 thru April 4 is being nationally sponsored as "Pancake Days". We are enclosing some promotional material that is colorful and should really help you sell 'em. The recipe book, put out by Quaker Oats, will really give you some ideas. Be sure and look it over.

WATCH FOR THE NEXT BULLETIN Within a few days there will be another bulletin issued giving you information as to the work we have done with the legislature regarding Sunday Closing and the newly proposed Tourist Bureau and Advertising program.

THINKING OUT LOUD : "Why is it that the less a man knows the longer it takes him to tell it?"

"Actually, there's only a slight difference between keeping your chin up and sticking your neck out--but it's worth knowing."

"Tipping has been defined as paying wages to other people's hired help."

"Wouldn't it be nice if we could find other things as easily as we find fault? Then we would all be rich."

SANDWICH FILLING: This is mighty good. Thought you might like it too
 Portion: #12 dipper makes 48 sandwiches; #24 dipper makes 96 sandwich Yield: 1 Gallon.

Processed cheese, grated (firmly packed) 1-1/2 gallons (or 6 lbs)
 Chili sauce, 3 cups (or 1 1/2 lbs)
 Ripe olives, chopped, 3 cups (or 3 4 1/2 oz. cans)
 Green pepper, chopped, 1 pint (or 5 medium size)

Method- Combine cheese, chili sauce, olives and green pepper. By reducing the quantities this is a good way to use cheese that has become a little hard. It really makes a luscious sandwich.

COLLECTION IDEA: Credit manager: "Are you going to pay us something on that account?"

Long Overduer: "I can't just now."

Credit Manager: "If you don't, I'm going to tell your other creditors that you paid us in full!"

GOOD FOOD, WELL SERVED—Mrs. Anne Hogg, instructor in food hostess training at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, demonstrates proper food service to A. Allan Coombs and Jay L. Nelson.

S. L. School to Train
New Food Hostesses

Food is necessary. But whether it is a necessary evil or a pleasure to partake depends a lot on the person preparing and serving it.

Training young women who are of a mind to make mealtime a pleasure is the object of a food hostess class scheduled to begin Monday at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

Follows Survey
 According to Jay L. Nelson, vocational school president, the class is being reactivated at the request of the Utah State Restaurant Assn. following their survey which showed a critical shortage of restaurant service employes in the area.

Classes in table setting, serving, menu study, developing job skill, personal appearance, salesmanship, working relationships, and job application will be held Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. at the school, 431-6th East. Persons interested may register at the school between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. beginning Friday.

A. Allan Coombs, president of the U S R A, said the school is designed to give professional training to young women in the food serving field "who are serious about their work and really want to do a good job."

Housewife Target
 "We are aiming at the housewives who would like to become a food hostess, but who have never quite dared to try, and at the other women in the field who want to feel the rightful dignity the job actually has," Mr. Coombs said. Students will be given practical experience at restaurants of members of the state association while they are learning the courses prescribed at the school, Mr. Nelson said. Mrs. Anne Hogg, 251-4th East, has been named instructor in the day school trade preparatory program. Mrs. Hogg, a veteran of 20 years in the food industry, is a former employe of the Ambassador Club, the Hotel Utah, and the Hot Shoppes. Members of the Advisory Committee who have assisted the school in establishing the program include: A. Allan Coombs, manager of the Beau Brummel Restaurant; Mrs. Eva J. Simmons, catering manager of the Hotel Temple Square; Jerry M. Clark, manager of the Hot Shoppes; Mrs. Charles L. Evans, manager of Evans' Restaurant; Mrs. Eva Wade, manager of Fred and Kelley's.

Well, Miner Mike keeps going to various schools in the state...schools being spots in which news of a unique sort frequently turns up. And one day during the past week I dropped in at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, seeking an answer to the question...how does a gal become an expert waitress?

Jay Nelson, director of the school, and Miss Anne Hogg, a very expert food hostess indeed, had invited me around to watch the training course in action... and I learned plenty.

And there's the psychology of the waitress, for instance. Even though you are counting calories, when a waitress suggests an eye appealing desert...suggests it in a pleasant, helpful voice, you're diet is liable to go by the boards, pronto.

The gals at this school for food hostesses...waitresses...receive expert instruction in personal grooming, in cosmetology, and in developing pleasing personalities. Which is as it should be, since as a group, waitresses are ambassadors of good will for Utah. EASTER BUNNY, CHICKS, DUCKLINGS AND

This Easter!

Yes, the Bunny Rabbit, chicks and ducklings will have to look to their laurels this Easter, as Mr. Turkey is out to "strut his stuff". The Utah Turkey Federation, as you know, is an Associate member of this Organization and the enclosed letter and publicity material is furnished by them to give you the story of their big Easter advertising campaign. Just one look at the Turkey Handbook will make you want to start cooking turkey. This is an expensive piece of literature. Look it over and save it for future reference.

There is a national surplus of turkeys, so let's get behind this promotion and capitalize on the profits. Besides, for my money, there isn't a finer, nicer meat than that tasty fine-grained turkey.

"EVIS" WATER CONDITIONER ???? ?

For your information, we want to present to you some correspondence relative to the "Evis" water conditioner. The following is a letter from the York Research Corporation to Dr. Henry Eyring, Graduate School, University of Utah:

"We are technical consultants to the American Hotel Association and have recently received a number of inquiries from member hotels about the Evis Water Conditioner.

"Included in literature from the manufacturer was the enclosed letter from Mr. Wells of the Evis Manufacturing Company to you. Since we have received a copy of this letter, it appears that it is being widely circulated, perhaps without your knowledge. In view of your great reputation in

Do you know, for instance, how to hoist a tray loaded with eighteen or twenty dishes high above your head, and carry the tray neatly from kitchen to customer, without spilling the food and crockery all over the floor? I still wouldn't like to try, but a dozen or so ladies are learning fast...and I predict you'll be seeing them in some of your favorite dining spots some day soon. Gals like Dona Llewellyn, Barbara Davies and Ilene Steljes, for example. Gals wearing trim, neat uniforms...doing a job that needs doing, and for good pay too.

Miner Mike learned that you order food for other reasons besides hunger. "There's eye appeal for example," said Miss Hogg. "Next time you see a waitress put down a very pretty, very nicely served lemon meringue pie on the table next to yours, you'll see that you are likely to order the same...because you like its looks, not just because you think it's going to be tasty."

science, we are calling this matter to your attention, because many uninformed persons will obviously believe that Mr. Wells has satisfactorily answered your objections. To the informed person, Mr. Wells' letter is naturally "hog-wash".

"We have run a number of tests on the Evis Conditioner and agree with you that it is without value. It is surprising, however, the success the company is having in selling these so-called magical units. It appears that the manufacturer is taking advantage of the situation which Barnum once observed that "there is one born every minute". It is distressing to us to see your respected name dragged into this huckstering.

"We would appreciate your returning the Evis letter to us at your convenience."

York Research Corporation
Edward J. Kenney,
Director of Laboratories.

Your secretary has inquired of Dr. Eyring, and has been advised by him that the claims for water conditioning made by this Company are without merit or substance, and that this pipe connection makes no change in the water whatsoever.

The reason we are presenting this to you is that Mr. Dick Lamb, one of our Board of Directors, recommended this device to us at our last State-wide meeting. Mr. Lamb at that time had not had a sufficient length of time with the actual use of the Evis Water Conditioner to give a report on performance. However, upon contacting Mr. Lamb on February 12, 1952, he advised us that the coils of his table have not had to be cleaned since September 1952; whereas, previous to this time he has had to clean the pipes every two months.

We are giving you this information so that you can use your own judgment should you be considering installing this type of equipment.

Food Hostess Training

We have just talked to Ann Hogg, who is teaching the Food Hostess Training class at the Salt Lake Vocational School. The girls are very enthusiastic about the class, and Mrs. Hogg says it is amazing the improved changes in these girls each and every day - and all but three of the girls are experienced in the trade.

The hostess from the Royal Room (Newhouse Hotel) is taking the course so she may be in a better position to help her girls. She says that this class is the finest thing she has ever encountered in the food service field.

One restaurant operator asked the question, "How can this course help us?" It has been said that a company's help can either make it or break it. This is true, and especially so in the restaurant industry. Don't kid yourself that your employees are all well trained - that it is the other fellow's place that needs better service.

Do you realize the restaurant industry in Utah must increase its number of girls by approximately 50% for the summer tourist trade? Do your part NOW to get some key girls trained. At this time we want to especially thank Jerry Clark, from the Hot Shoppes, for his support of this class.

SECOND CLASS TO START A second class will start April 13, and will have your girls trained by the beginning of the tourist season. If enough interest can be created in a shorter evening class - this can also be arranged.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY, and OBLIGATION to get behind this program. What about you members from other parts of the State than Salt Lake City? Let's make it a pleasure to eat out anywhere in the State of Utah.

Do you know, for instance, how to hoist a tray loaded with eighteen or twenty dishes high above your head, and carry the tray neatly from kitchen to customer, without spilling the food and crockery all over the floor? I still wouldn't like to try, but a dozen or so ladies are learning fast...and I predict you'll be seeing them in some of your favorite dining spots some day soon. IDEAS

General Foods comes up with this one:

Pan-Sans - This is a pancake sandwich, and mighty good, too. They can be featured any time of the day. Here are some suggestions: Use about 1/3 cup of pancake batter for each cake. To make each pan-san, spread one of the savory fillings given below on a hot pancake and cover with a second pancake, thus making a sandwich.

COLORADO PAN-SAN

For each pan-san, spread one pancake with 2 tablespoons warmed currant jelly, cover with 1/2 cup hot cooked sausage meat, then with second pancake. (For 50 portions, warm 1 3/4 quarts currant jelly and pan-fry 12 pounds bulk sausage meat until well done.)

CANADIAN BACON AND PINEAPPLE

For each pan-san, use 2 slices grilled Canadian bacon and about 2 tablespoons of pineapple.

From the Society of Advanced Management: "No war, no strike, no depression, can so completely destroy an established business or its profits, as new and better methods, equipment and materials in the hands of an enlightened competitor." Stop a minute and think that one over.

SAMPLING YOUR SPECIALTIES: Have you ever asked your customers to sample one of your specialties - FREE - even though they've ordered something else? National Restaurant Association points out that people love to be asked for an opinion.

"The restaurant man with friends is a lot better off than the restaurant man with money--the government can't tax away your friends."

THE TEN "B'S" OF GOOD SUPERVISION

1. Be genuinely interested in people
2. Be kind and understanding
3. Be able to smile
4. Be honest in your dealings
5. Be dependable
6. Be unselfish
7. Be willing to encourage others
8. Be able to practice self control
9. Be loyal to co-workers and management
10. Be constantly practicing the "Foundations for Good Relations"

SALT LAKE AREA
VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

APR 9 1953

THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE, Monday Morning, April 27, 1953

I DON'T GUESS?
I KNOW WHAT TO DO!

YES, THE GIRLS WHO HAVE FINISHED THE FIRST SIX WEEKS' TRAINING COURSE AT THE VOCATIONAL SCHOOL, REALLY KNOW WHAT TO DO AT ALL TIMES!

I have visited the classes conducted at the School, and directed by Mrs. Hogg. I also know of the lectures and help given by some of our local restaurateurs. I can assure you that this class is a great benefit to the entire Restaurant Industry.

MY GIRLS ARE TRAINED From all over we hear the statement: "We do not have to send any of our girls to the school, because all of our girls are trained." A check has been made of many of the leading restaurants and eating counters, and promptly errors can be "spotted". Do not think that the "whole Army is out of step, but you".

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS

We appeal to you to get behind this training program. You are contacting places little and big, members and non-members, all over the Intermountain territory. Let's tell them about it. The chances are many don't know anything about this opportunity for girls to improve themselves. You can do the entire industry a great service by encouraging the girls to take this course and thus improve themselves, and thereby make themselves more valuable to their employers. The training the girls get along the lines of personal appearance and proper grooming will surprise you.

HELP NEEDED Every paper has many ads for various types of restaurant help. Surely there should be sufficient positions for evening work to help these girls pay their way, if you will just get back of them and help them to get started. The entire tuition fee is only $25.00.

MONDAY APRIL 13 A new 6-week course will start April 13. Let us hear from all over the State. Heber City and Bountiful have made inquires this week. Let's have a full class - REMEMBER, April 13. CONTACT either this office, or the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 South Sixth East, Salt Lake City - Telephone 3-4594.

WENZEL

The seventh Wenzel article is attached to this bulletin. Again, we urge you to keep a file of these valuable articles.

"Even the smallest undertaking is worth the pains of good workmanship."...Plaque. We might carry this thought over to our restaurants and say that even the smallest operation is worthy of serving good food, with courteous service in a clean and pleasant atmosphere.

A platoon of Salt Lake City firemen listen intently while Stephen J. Beeley, Salt Lake Area Vocational School, tells methods of instruction. The firemen attend the instructor training school voluntarily one day a week for six weeks.

Constant Drilling Stressed At S. L. Fireman School

"We don't have time during an emergency to look through a book for the solution to a problem!"

"That's the reason for constant drill in the fire department," explained Asst. Chief D. E. White, drills and training division.

Fifty-four firemen eligible to attend the instructor training course provided by the department are currently doing so—on a voluntary basis, he said.

Good Memory Stressed

In explaining the school's purpose, Chief White said: "The tremendous amount of memory work required in fire-fighting and the wide range of subject material necessitates a constant drill program throughout the department."

"Every officer must be a teacher and know how to handle his men."

To "provide men with the "know how" of instruction, the Salt Lake fire department in co-operation with Salt Lake Area Vocational School has set up a series of conferences during morning hours, which point out methods of teaching and handling men.

Lesson Preparation

Included in the subjects are conferences on lesson preparation, use of visual aids and methods of handling varied personalities.

The program, Chief White said, is expanded over a period of six weeks, with classes held for three hours, one day a week, under direction of LeRoy Walters, in charge of supervisory personnel development, S.L.A.V.S.

Once again we want to bring to your attention one of our loyal Associate Members -

THE UTAH PIE COMPANY, 2575 South State Street, Salt Lake City, Utah.

It is really interesting to note the success stories we have among our Associate Members. Surely the Utah Pie Company can tell a success story. They started "very humble", to quote Mr. Bryant O. Rigby and Merritt O. Rigby, twenty years ago. These men started this business and have remained partners and managers, even to the present day. This certainly speaks well of this management team.

Their business has continuously progressed, and they have kept up with modern machinery and methods. Customers can be assured that nothing but the finest and cleanest comes out of their shop. They have lined all the walls and working tables with aluminum and stainless steel to ensure absolute cleanliness and sanitation. They have two huge revolving ovens, which take 200 pies in each oven at one baking, or 400 pies at one time are baked. Now, for the real figures. They average 3,000 to 5,000 pies per day, with Sunday being the big day baking 5,000 little pies and 3,000 big pies. This is rather a lot pies, even though they are distributed over the entire State of Utah.

We asked Mr. Rigby what kind of pie topped all others in popular demand. He says that apple comes first, with cherry second, and blueberry third. Of course, they make all kinds of cream pies, too. But, we are glad to know of the demand for apple, cherry and blueberry, because Utah has an abundance of all three.

The Utah Pie Company has always tried to give a product and service that would warrant the confidence of the restaurants and hotels. They wish to take this opportunity of thanking you for the splendid business you have given them, and hope to merit a continuation of your business through the use of high-grade products, and prompt efficient delivery service.

Ask any manager or chef, "Why put sweetbreads on the menu?" and the reply will invariably be, "We sell lots of them." I will grant that a restaurant doing $800.00 a day or more in volume may be justified in running sweetbreads, corned beef, veal hearts and lots of other similar slow-moving foods, but the facts in 99 out of 100 cases prove that the average restaurant throws money away on such items and even on more seemingly popular items.

MAKE A 30 DAY ANALYSIS

Don't guess. Make a 30 day analysis and get the facts. If you want a set of analysis forms with instructions, send $5.00 to George L. Wenzel, 161 West Wisconsin Ave., Milwaukee 3, Wisc. Meanwhile, since I have completely discussed the method of making such an analysis before, I shall confine this article to the results of such analyses by taking three typical cases.

In analysis No. 1, 10 menu items produced 60.6% of this restaurant's total income. Then followed an additional 21 items which brought in another 28.8% of the volume, making the grand total 31 menu items bringing in 89.4% of the total income. Example:

MENU ITEM	MENU PRICE	NO. SOLD	DOLLAR VOL.
1. 1/2 Chicken Dinner	$1.30	3491	$4583
2. B B W Ribs	1.50	2117	3176
3. 1/2 Chicken Basket	1.10	1110	1221
4. Club Steak	1.60	647	1035
5. B B Ham Dinner	1.35	726	990
6. Shrimp Dinner	1.35	682	921
7. Small T-Bone	2.00	447	894
8. Large T-Bone	2.75	295	811
9. Double Chicken Dinner	2.50	381	762
10. Ribs in Basket	1.15	591	679

MENU ITEM	MENU PRICE	NO. SOLD	DOLLAR VOL.
1. Beer	20-25	5163	$1203
2. Chicken Dinner	1.75	262	459
3. T-Bone	2.20	141	310
4. Hamburger Steak	.85	354	301
5. Baked Ham Lunch	.85	435	283
6. Pie	.15	1880	283
7. Virginia Ham Dinner	1.75	155	271
8. Cube Steak Dinner	1.55	157	243
9. Juices	.15	1437	216
10. Small T-Bone	1.55	129	200

In case two the ten top sellers brought in 50% of the total volume with the next additional 21 items accounting for another $2,402, making 31 menu items account for 82% of the total restaurant volume. Now what is the purpose of these menu analyses? Let us take one more analysis, but this time for a 60 day period because you may very reasonably say, "But the customers may select entirely different items the next month!"

MENU ITEM	OCTOBER SALES	NOVEMBER SALES	AVERAGE	COMMENT
1. Special Burger	2329	1971	4200	(double burger)
2. Hamburger	6698	5708	6200
3. Cheeseburger	1698	1587	1600

This particular restaurant made their first analysis last October. The food cost for October ran 50%. The restaurant had filed 44% food cost, so there was no point in running at 50%. The loss for October was $525. It was at this point that I was called in to help bring the food cost under control.

Immediately the manager looked at the analysis and learned that 12,000 hamburger patties brought in most of the money, so he began to check the boy making the patties. Every patty he made was supposed to run 2 ozs. or 8 to the pound. Yet every patty was almost uniformly 1/3 oz. heavier than the standard the manager had set. Figure it out 1/3 oz. times 12,000 times equals 4000 ounces or 250 pounds. Times 60¢ this amounts to $150.00.

On the BBQ Sandwiches averaging 4,000 per month the boys were putting 5 to 6 ounces on a bun instead of the required three ounces. If we figure just one oz. saved by controlling these 4,000 sandwiches, it means 250 pounds at a cooked value of $1.50, this amounts to $400.00.

On the beer, because no one checked on the beer man the manager discovered a shortage of 670 bottles. He at once built a cheap wood enclosure and made sure every case of beer was checked in properly and cut the beer losses the month of November to less than 27 bottles!

On malts and shakes he figures two No. 24 scoops of ice cream. The girls were using three double-heaped scoops!!! Just figure saving 1 1/2 ozs. (No. 24 scoop) 3,200 times and you get 60 gallons of ice cream at $1.35 per gallon or $81.00.

On coffee he used an average of 210 pounds! To make an average of 6,500 cups of coffee requires only 160 pounds of coffee, figuring a conservative 40 cups per pound. The truth was that in November his coffee requirements dropped 80 pounds simply because he figured that by putting out only six pounds per day and locking the rest up the crew should get by very well--so he saved 80 pounds times 80¢ or $64.00.

The same with the soft drinks which he put under lock and key and rationed out an average of 300 bottles per day, which is what the sales manager showed was required. He saved $100.00 here.

In November his food cost dropped to 45%. But, when I talked to this manager in January 1952 here are his exact words:

"Mr. Wenzel, my volume starts falling off during the winter months from October to March. I never expect to make any profit at all during November, December and especially January. But, believe it or not, in January, my worst month, I made $2,700.00 net profit which is a 27% net profit!!! Just by making this menu analysis and watching the big

A platoon of Salt Lake City firemen listen intently while Stephen J. Beeley, Salt Lake Area Vocational School, tells methods of instruction. The firemen attend the instructor training school voluntarily one day a week for six weeks.

Constant Drilling Stressed At S. L. Fireman School

"We don't have time during an emergency to look through a book for the solution to a problem!"

"That's the reason for constant drill in the fire department," explained Asst. Chief D. E. White, drills and training division.

Fifty-four firemen eligible to attend the instructor training course provided by the department are currently doing so—on a voluntary basis, he said.

Good Memory Stressed

In explaining the school's purpose, Chief White said: "The tremendous amount of memory work required in fire-fighting and the wide range of subject material necessitates a constant drill program throughout the department."

"Every officer must be a teacher and know how to handle his men."

To "provide men with the 'know how' of instruction, the Salt Lake fire department in co-operation with Salt Lake Area Vocational School has set up a series of conferences during morning hours, which point out methods of teaching and handling men.

Lesson Preparation

Included in the subjects are conferences on lesson preparation, use of visual aids and methods of handling varied personalities.

The program, Chief White said, is expanded over a period of six weeks, with classes held for three hours, one day a week, under direction of LeRoy Walters, in charge of supervisory personnel development, S.L.A.V.S.

What Is Education's Aim?

By STEPHEN J. BEELEY
Training Consultant, Salt Lake Area Vocational School

Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins' speech before the University of Utah Alumni Assn. undoubtedly was a very scholarly address. A great deal of respect must be had for his judgment regarding American colleges and universities, but he expressed a consummate lack of understanding of the other facets of the system. As with many other educators, Dr. Hutchins' thinking has been too long bound by the old, narrow traditions which he so eloquently expressed.

The speaker made the points that "What belongs in education is what helps the student to learn to think for himself, to form an independent judgment, and to take his part as a responsible citizen."

Must Prepare Individual

As a generalized philosophical concept this is beautifully idealistic; the only thing remaining is for us to interpret it properly. Public education has the obligation of preparing each individual for his place in society whether he wants to be a lawyer, a doctor, a philosopher or an auto mechanic, a bricklayer or a barber. Unless people are equipped with the tools with which they can earn their daily bread, they cannot, regardless of how idealistic we may want to be, fit themselves into society and become good citizens.

Dr. Hutchins' statements regarding vocational training in the public schools show a surprising lack of insight into the processes of industry and into our present system of vocational training.

Aren't Swept Away

The products of industry may or may not change overnight, but the processes are not swept away, as he puts it, if for no other reason than the investment in money, machines, planning, etc. Our system of free enterprise will not permit this.

tem of free enterprise will not permit this. He stated that "since the schools can engage in vocational training only with obsolescent teachers using obsolescent machines, it is not surprising that industry can do a better job of training in a shorter time than the schools can ever do."

Experience Required

Even in our own backward community, and it is backward compared to the country as a whole, the teachers in our vocational school are required to have at least six years of actual experience working in the occupation which they intend to teach before they will even be considered for employment; once they are employed, they must go out into industry and work as tradesmen for specified periods at specified intervals throughout their teaching careers or they will not be re-employed each year. We are sure Dr. Hutchins is speaking of big business when he makes the aforesaid statement, because this is not true of small business in general. There are very few businesses in the state of Utah large enough to provide adequate training for their own employees.

Patronizing Attitude

A great majority of the people of the institutions of higher learning take a very patronizing attitude to the "blue-collar" worker, but we must never forget that he is the man who must do the world's work in an industrial economy such as ours and that if our system is to grow and prosper, we must provide a "paved street" for all people to walk upon, educationally speaking.

It is the obligation of the public school system to provide equal educational opportunities for all, whether they wish to be school teachers, plumbers, mothers, lawyers or carpenters.

Rites to End Training For 154 at S. L. School

Accomplishment exercises will be held Thursday at 7:15 p.m. at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 S. 6th East, for 154 students who have completed training during the year. Clinton Barton, training officer of the U. S. Naval Supply Depot at Clearfield, will speak on "Learn to Earn—Learn to Live." Student talks will be given by Donald J. Bell and Edwin A. Crow.

A scholarship given by the Salt Lake Kiwanis Club will be presented by Jaren L. Jones, chairman of the Kiwanis Vocational Guidance Committee.

Jay L. Nelson, president of the school, noted that under the training program 35 women have been prepared to enter hospitals and homes as practical nurses, 40 students have entered directly into employment at nearby military installations, and the remaining students are entering into the shops and factories of the area.

SUCCESS STORY—Despite the fact that Joseph M. Larsen lost an arm and three fingers of his remaining hand in an accident, he is still making an enviable record in typewriting and business education at Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

Inspiring Success Story

Vet Amputee Finishes S. L. Business Study

Being able to typewrite 30 words per minute is no great accomplishment — unless, like Joseph M. Larsen, you have only one finger and a thumb with which to achieve this record.

Mr. Larsen, who is this week completing a business course at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, also operates an adding machine, calculator, and book-keeping machine.

According to his instructors, the 20-year-old veteran "has a wonderful attitude toward his work, does not ask help or assistance from anyone, and will be a great asset to any office he enters."

Mr. Larsen lost his left arm and three fingers on his right hand in a railroad accident two years ago. He enrolled at the vocational school last September.

Recently Mr. Larsen was awarded a letter of commendation from the school for "making the most outstanding progress of all students in his department."

Mr. Larsen, who resides at 2848 South 8500 West St., Magna, is a graduate of Cyprus High School, where he won a letter in football.

He will be graduated from Salt Lake Area Vocational School at exercises planned for 8:15 p.m. Thursday at the school, 431 Sixth East St.

61 Graduate From Area Trade School

Sixty-one students of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School received certificates Thursday night at accomplishment exercises.

Six students were named recipients of Area Board of Control Scholarships, including Larry Bennett, Karleen A. Burkholder, Floyd Allred, Carol Carlson, Earl Homer and Bruce Burnham.

William M. Mares, of 132 University Ave., was presented the Kiwanis Scholarship for study in electronics by Jaren L. Jones, chairman, Vocational Guidance Committee, Salt Lake Kiwanis Club.

Donald J. Bell, barber, and Edwin A. Crow, machinist, addressed the group as student speakers. Mr. Crow emphasized the importance of putting into the job whatever one expects to get from it, and Mr. Bell spoke of the value of training for a trade.

Achievement certificates were presented by T. Quentin Cannon, member of the Area Board of Control. Principal address was delivered by Clinton Barton, training officer of the U. S. Naval Supply Depot, Clearfield.

Vocational School to Graduate 154

Trade and training programs at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, have been completed within the past year by 154 students, it was announced Tuesday. They will be recognized in accomplishment exercises to be held at the school Thursday at 8:15 p.m.

C. W. Barton, training officer at U. S. Naval Supply Depot, Clearfield, will address the graduates, using as his subject, "Learn to Earn, Learn to Live."

Another feature of the program will be presentation of a scholarship by Jaren L. Jones, chairman, Salt Lake Kiwanis Club vocational guidance committee.

Of the 154, 35 women have completed training as practical nurses; 40 students have accepted employment at nearby military installations and the rest will go into shops and factories in the area, said Jay L. Nelson, president.

Those who have completed training include:

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The Accomplishment Exercises of May 28, 1953, mark the completion of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School's fifth year of operation. During these five years, the school has constantly attempted to discover and provide the sort of training program that will best serve the people, the industry, and the economy of the State of Utah. The scope of this training can best be measured by examining the following summary of students who have had the opportunity to develop or improve job skills.

Year	Day	Evening	Total
1948-49	603	798	1401
1949-50	552	545	1097
1950-51	519	973	1492
1951-52	602	1081	1683
1952-53	550*	767*	1317*

*Additional programs are scheduled before the end of the current year.

As the economy of our state becomes more highly industrialized, the need for trained workers continues to increase. The school has always operated near capacity and the demand for some programs has required the maintenance of waiting lists.

Representatives from labor and industry, working co-operatively with school representatives, are devoting many hours to the improvement of both the scope and quality of the training programs offered. Such co-operative efforts insure that the school will make its utmost contribution to the well-being of the people and the state of Utah.

Vocational 'Graduates'

Unique among the many "commencement" programs this week is the fifth annual Accomplishment Exercises being held tonight at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

One hundred and sixty-five persons will receive certificates attesting to completion of training courses. And demands are so great for the "blue collar" worker that about 100 young people accepted employment during the year without finishing their training. Another 150 will return to complete their two-year programs next terms.

Most of the "graduates" will go directly into jobs. They include trained auto mechanics, barbers, carpenters, commercial artists, cosmetologists, draftsmen, electricians, tailors, welders, aircraft machinists and sheet metal workers, food hostesses and machine shopmen. About 40 practical nurses received certificates at separate exercises.

The National Manpower Council recently stressed the need for highly educated "brainpower" to enable the country to maintain its world leadership. The importance of scientists and engineers cannot be overemphasized, but the country also needs good mechanics, electronics workers and others to assist the specialists. As industrialization of Utah increases, trade school trainees are more in demand.

One fine service of the vocational school is that it provides a "second chance" for young people who fail to measure up in regular high school academic courses. During 1952-53 nearly 200 high school students transferred to the area trade school. Sixty per cent of them adjusted successfully to trade school environment, and the others were returned to high school for further counseling.

The importance of vocational training in the educational system deserves recognition.

Raises in Salary Granted To 11 State Capitol Employees

Eleven state employees at the State Capitol recommended for pay raises by a state committee on wages were allowed increases Wednesday by action of the Board of Examiners.

The board was not so kind, however, toward the president and 10 instructors at the Salt Lake Vocational School, also recommended for increases.

All of the school pay increases were denied, although Atty. Gen. E. R. Callister voted for the increases. Secretary of State Lamont F. Toronto joined with Gov. J. Bracken Lee in opposing the increases. Mr. Toronto said the committee on wages headed by H. C. Shoemaker had not favored the increases unanimously; therefore he voted against them.

Jay L. Nelson, school president, would have been raised from $518 to $533.33 a month if the increases had been allowed.

Employees at the State Capitol allowed increases were Dr. John I. Curtis, state veterinarian, from $405 to $450 a month (the committee recommended $475); C. Ray Openshaw Jr., Tax Commission executive secretary, from $425 to $475; E. Elbridge Morrill Jr., director of occupational health, from $500 to $525, and eight employees of the attorney general's office.

The legal staff employees increased were Peter M. Lowe, deputy attorney general, from $450 to $475; six assistants to the attorney general all raised from $400 to $425, Richard L. Stine, John W. Horsley, H. R.

Waldo Jr., R. B. Porter Jr. and Ken Chamberlain, and Joan Lee, secretary, from $250 to $275.

Employment of a new assistant attorney general, Earl S. Spafford, at $350 a month, was approved.

Board Okehs Parking Lot

State Road Commission plans for a parking lot on the southwest corner of the Capitol grounds to serve the Pioneer Memorial Bldg. were approved by the State Board of Examiners Wednesday.

The parking area, ordered by the 1953 Legislature, will accommodate 48 cars, with the entry and exit on 2nd North.

Wage increases or starting salaries for 14 state employees were approved, but 11 requests from Salt Lake Area Vocational School were turned down by Gov. J. Bracken Lee and Secy. of State Lamont F. Toronto when the special wage recommendation committee failed to come up with a unanimous approval. Atty. Gen. E. R. Callister favored the boosts.

A $20,240 deficit to the district courts was permitted after the 1951 appropriations proved insufficient to pay statutory salaries, including those of court reporters whose pay was increased by the same session of the Legislature.

'Total Loss' Car Made Almost Good as New

Want a new car cheap? Well, it's comparatively new and comparatively cheap. It's a 1949 model purchased recently by the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, to give students a chance to learn the auto repair business.

Second-year students got practice in aligning body and frame, in cutting, welding, filling and metal finishing. They also replaced glass and trim and gave the car a new coat of paint.

Students working on the car included Kiyoshi Nakayu, Ron Wegner, James Angus, Lee Garcia and Byron Keller. They were directed by Levern Hansen and Orrin W. Spainhower.

The completely repaired car will be sold to the bidder submitting the highest bid by Friday. Those interested in bidding may call 3-4594.

Rebuilt Car Sold On Bid of $915

A 1949 sedan rebuilt by automotive repair students at Salt Lake Area Vocational School Saturday was sold to the highest bidder for $915.

The winning bid was submitted by Richard F. Cole, of 573 Dexter St. The wrecked four-door sedan was purchased by the school in February as a "total loss." But three months of work by students put it in first class shape.

Training Course For Firemen Set June 18-20

Salt Lake City Fire Department will hold its ninth annual firemen's training course June 18-20, at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 S. 6th East, it was announced Friday.

Directed by the city's top fire fighters and safety experts, the three-day school will feature talks by D. E. White of the fire department, program director; Ben E. Lingenfelter, commissioner of public safety, and Fire Chief J. K. Piercey.

Among demonstrations will be those on fighting factory and electric fires, control of rubber tire blazes, use of various types of equipment and methods of preventing fire spread.

One of the most spectacular demonstrations will be a controlled exhibit on how to fight flammable liquid fires. It will be presented under direction of Capt. W. S. Higham and Lt. J. H. Daughters at 2:30 p.m. June 18 at the grandstand, Utah State Fairgrounds.

Among other speakers at the sessions opening at 8:30 a.m. June 18, will be Jay W. Stevens, assistant manager, National Board of Fire Underwriters; Ralph D. Callister, state national director, Utah Association of Insurance Agents; Hon. Charles Mabey, former Utah governor, and Carl A. Weers, engineer, national underwriters board.

Registration will be held the first morning at the area school building.

Stressed during the course, according to Chief White, will be latest scientific improvements in fire fighting methods such as use of air and carbon dioxide in the bottom of tank fires.

Newness will be the keynote also in showing basic operations and maintenance of apparatus and pumps.

During the Friday 9 a.m. session, Lt. L. R. DeKorver of the city fire department will discuss "How Water Supply Affects Fire Fighting."

School for Firemen

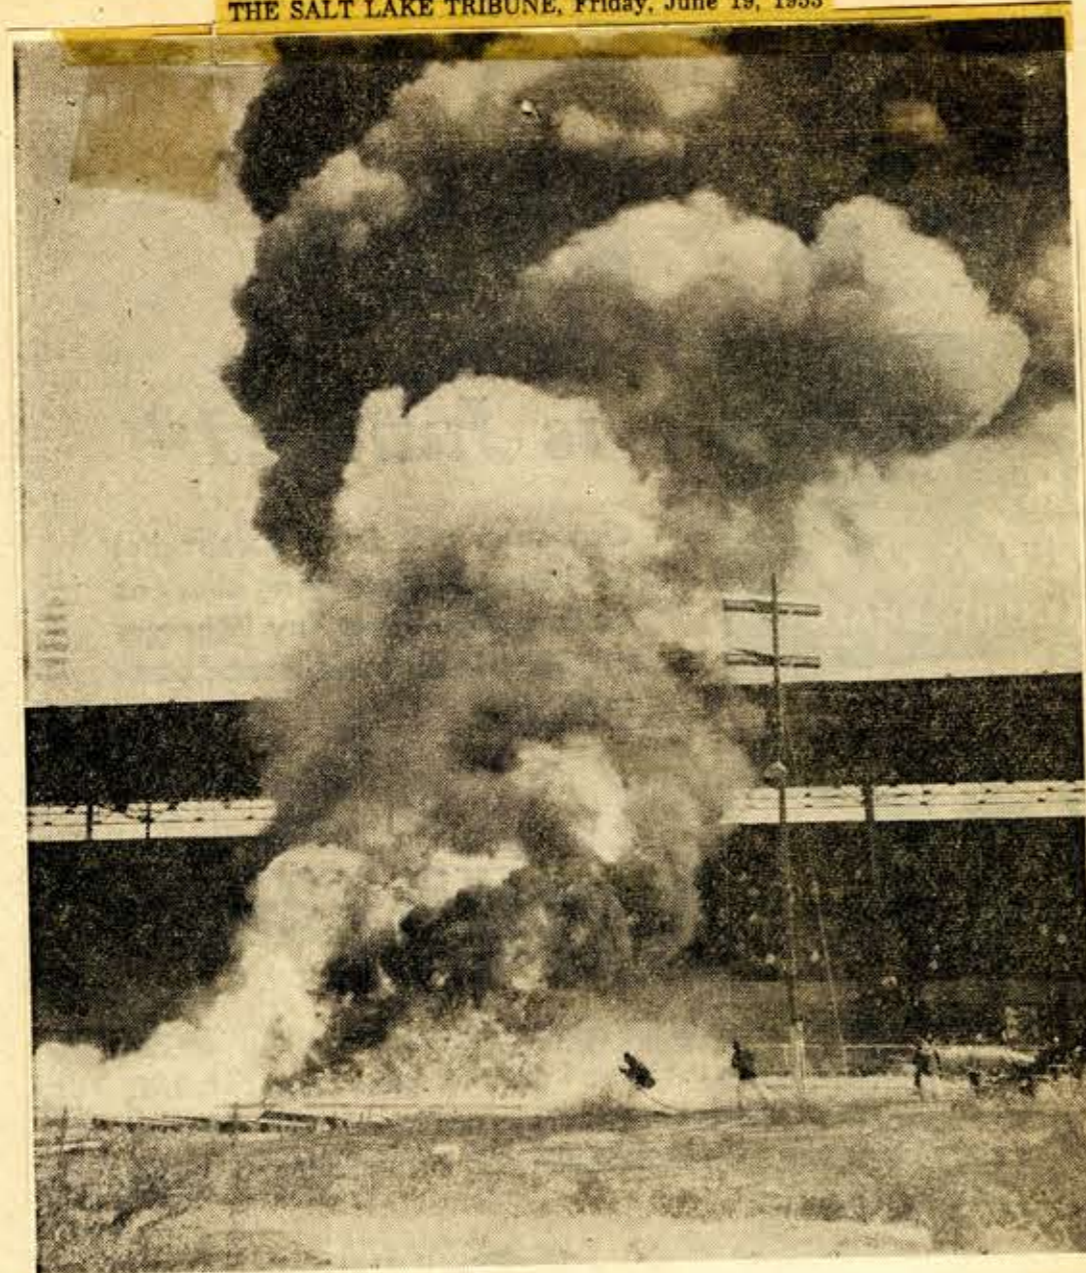

The Ninth Annual Firemen's Training School, sponsored by the Salt Lake City Fire Department, will be held June 18, 19 and 20 at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, under the direction of D. E. White, assistant Salt Lake City fire chief.

The school has grown year by year and achieved such success that Idaho, Wyoming and Montana—neighboring states which in the past sent members of fire departments to the Salt Lake City school for training—have now established their own training schools.

There is one further development in the holding of regional training schools in various parts of the state, supplementing the lectures and demonstrations of the Salt Lake City school with on-the-ground individual instruction.

While firemen of the larger city paid departments attend the school in numbers and profit much from it, the essential purpose and greatest value of the program is to give instruction in the latest fire-fighting techniques and procedures to the members of small-town volunteer departments. These groups have no way to carry on regular training programs such as are an established part of big-city fire department operation. Yet they need to know what fire hazards to look out for in their communities, how best to combat various kinds of fires, how to use new apparatus and techniques.

We do not doubt the Salt Lake City Fire Department's training program has prevented many fires, saved much property damage and probably a number of lives. It is an excellent program in the interest of fire safety and every community should take advantage of the training opportunity by sending one or more of its department personnel to the school.

Flames and smoke billow from the burning hulk of an airplane during one of a series of demonstrations at Utah State Fairgrounds for ninth annual Firemen's Training School.

Fire Fighters to Turn 'Pupil' For School on Prevention

Prevention of fires in business and industrial plants will keynote the Ninth Annual Firemen's Training School to be conducted June 18, 19 and 20, with headquarters at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

Carl A. Weers, National Board of Fire Underwriters, and Utah's former governor, Charles Mabey, are scheduled to greet the "pupils."

Registration for visiting firemen and leaders of various fire prevention agencies throughout the west will begin June 18 at 8:30 a.m., with the first group assembly scheduled one hour later.

SCHOOL 'EXAMS'

Laddies Quell Raging Fire In Training Class Test

In a series of spectacular demonstrations at Utah State Fairgrounds, delegates to the ninth annual Firemen's Training School were shown latest and most effective methods of fire-fighting at the school's opening session Thursday.

Some 400 representatives of fire units from Utah communities in addition to several visiting firemen, are registered for the three-day meet.

Directed by Capt. W. S. Higham and Lt. J. H. Daughters, two companies from Salt Lake City fire department staged a number of demonstrations on control of flammable liquid fires. The blazing skeleton of a large airplane, which had been soaked with gasoline and oil for the demonstration, sent spectators scurrying for cooler seats in the fairgrounds grandstand as smoke and flames belched more than 200 feet in the air.

The fire-fighting team quelled the blaze in less than three minutes.

Other demonstrations included combating escaping butane gas, leaking gasoline and the control of rubber and tire fires.

Friday's sessions will begin at 9 a.m. at Salt Lake Area Vocational School with lectures on how water supply affects fire fighting, effective fire streams and how fires spread.

Firemen List Program of State School

Fire-fighting units from throughout Utah will attend the opening Thursday of the ninth annual Firemen's Training School which will feature lectures and demonstrations at Salt Lake Area Vocational School and the Utah State Fairgrounds.

Registration for the three-day sessions will begin at 8:30 p.m. at the vocational school.

Asst. Chief D. E. White, training division, said delegates to the school will be divided into three groups and will rotate classwork.

An address of welcome will be given by Ben E. Lingenfelter, commissioner of public safety. Other principal speakers at the opening session will include Fire Chief J. K. Piercey, Salt Lake City Fire Dept.; Jay W. Stevens, assistant manager, National Bureau of Underwriters; Ralph D. Callister, state national director, Utah Association of Insurance Agents; Charles Mabey, former governor of Utah, and Carl A. Webb, engineer, National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Thursday sessions will include lectures on plant fire protection, equipment and training, inspection and prevention and a discussion on how electricity starts fires.

Demonstrations at Utah State Fairgrounds will include flammable liquid problems, controlling leaking gasoline fires, flashbacks, combatting airplane or tanker fires and extinguishing and controlling of rubber and tire fires.

"Smoke-eaters" of Salt Lake City Fire Department stage a drill in clearing smoke with "fog-nozzles" designed for spraying water over a wide area. Use of the nozzle will be a feature of Firemen's Training School set for June 18.

400 Expected To Enroll in Safety Course

Over 400 enrollees representing all phases of public safety are expected to sign up for the ninth annual Firemen's Training School, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, according to Assistant Fire Chief Don E. White, program director.

The training sessions, to be held at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 461-6th East, are under the direction of Ben E. Lingenfelter, Salt Lake Public Safety Commissioner and J. K. Piercey, chief, fire department.

Prepared chiefly for volunteer firemen the sessions are also open to regular and military fire departments. Fort Douglas, Tooele, Dugway, Hill Field, Clearfield and the Ogden General Depot are expected to send representatives. Industrial plant safety men, insurance agents and members of state safety organizations are also invited, said Assistant Chief White.

Fire Fighters Rout Smoke In 2 Minutes

Salt Lake City Fire Department's "smoke-eaters" stepped up drills in fire fighting Saturday in preparation for the ninth annual Firemen's Training School scheduled for three days beginning June 18.

A crew of men from the department's No. 1 station, aided by a No. 5 station pumper truck, staged a drill in clearing smoke and flames from a building by use of hose equipped with "fog-nozzles," designed to thin a jet of water to a fine spray over a wide area.

Clear Smoky Room

Directed by Lt. J. Q. Andrew, the crew members donned oxygen masks and manned the specially equipped hoses. A large room at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, which was filled with smoke for purposes of the drill, was cleared by the crew within two minutes.

Lt. Andrew said, "We are encouraging the use of these nozzles in removing smoke from buildings because the spray is an advantage over the "straight stream" of water and at the same time offers the firemen protection."

Instruct Visitors

"We intend to show visiting firemen by demonstration that a fog stream removes heat as well as smoke. The method is exceptionally good in combating basement fires," he said.

The training school will feature demonstrations in fighting flammable liquid fires, crash fires and control of rubber and tire fires.

Firemen Open Training School

A spectacular demonstration Thursday on fighting flammable liquid fires highlighted the opening day of the ninth annual Firemen's Training School.

Held in the fairgrounds grandstand, the demonstration was directed by Capt. W. W. Higham and Lt. J. H. Daughters of the Salt Lake Fire Department. Airplane crash fires took up most of the demonstration.

The fire-fighting demonstration was one of eight activities presented to the more than 400 firemen and public safety officials Thursday. Water supplies and fire fighting will keynote all Friday's training activities.

BRIDE—Mrs. Orval Kurt Anderson, who formerly was Miss Ila Dalea Howard.

The Orval Andersons Will Greet Guests

The marriage of Miss Ila Dalea Howard and Orval Kurt Anderson was solemnized Wednesday.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. David E. Howard of Woods Cross. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Anderson of St. Charles, Id.

Salt Lake Temple nuptials united the couple in marriage. A breakfast given afterward at the home of the bride's parents honored the wedding party.

Wednesday evening, the couple will greet guests at a reception at the South Bountiful Ward meetinghouse.

Traditional Gown

The bride will wear a traditional white slipper satin gown, fashioned with puffed sleeves of net and a basque waist. Cascading in fragile tiers, an overskirt of net sweeps floor length. The bridal veil is elbow length and falls from a bonnet-type headdress. She is to carry an orchid encircled with stephanotis.

Attendants to the bride will wear pastel frocks and carry matching bouquets. They are Miss Ruth Ann Nelson, Mr. David Ogilvie and Mrs. Sherman Bennett.

Best Man

Carl Anderson will be best man. James Linford, Blair Rich and Wesley Winegar to usher.

The newlyweds will honeymoon at Yellowstone Park.

For travel, the bride has chosen a pink polished cotton dress, accented with pink and black accessories.

The couple will reside in Salt Lake City at 118 E St.

Entire System in Utah To Operate Monday

Summer vacation ended Tuesday for additional thousands of Utah students.

Even Labor Day was no holiday for some. Pupils in the Iron, Morgan, and South Sanpete districts went back to the classrooms Monday.

Salt Lake private schools either opened doors or prepared to begin activities for the 1953-54 school term.

School began Tuesday in the Box Elder, Beaver, Cache, Daggett, Duchesne, Kane, Rich, Tooele, Uintah, Wasatch, Wayne, Provo, and Logan districts.

All Open by Monday

South Summit students will go back to school Wednesday and in the Davis District, classes will begin Thursday.

Alpine, Nebo, North Summit, Weber, and Ogden schools will open next Monday. At that time all Utah public schools will be in operation.

In Salt Lake City the Cathedral School opened Tuesday for grades one to eight. Kindergarten pupils will return Wednesday.

Judge Memorial School and Judge Memorial High School also welcomed students Tuesday.

At St. Mary's

Registration for academy and grade school students was conducted Tuesday at St. Mary-of-the-Wasatch. Classwork will begin Wednesday. College students will register Sept. 15 for classwork beginning the following day.

Rowland Hall School for Girls, will open Friday for high school and elementary students and Monday for nursery and kindergarten pupils.

Students planning to enter the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, began registering Tuesday.

369 DAYTIME STUDENTS

Vocational School Signup Breaks Previous Mark

With 369 students enrolled, registrations for daytime classes in the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East broke all previous records, Jay L. Nelson, president, said Sunday.

Evening classes will be held on Mondays through Thursdays from 7 to 10 p.m., with the day school scheduled Mondays through Fridays.

Four courses — Automobile mechanics, automobile body repairing and painting, business practice, cosmetology and electronics—were closed to further registrations with many students on the waiting lists. The school has a normal day class capacity of 350 pupils.

The day classes began their year's work last week and the evening classes will start their studies Monday.

LeRoy A. Blaser Given New Assignment

USAC Alumnae Press
LeRoy A. Blaser, executive secretary of the Alumni Association, has been appointed director of public information and college development. He will also retain the position of alumni secretary.

Creation of the new position by the board of trustees this summer is in keeping with a recommendation of the Kelly Survey committee. Mr. Blaser will coordinate and increase the work now being done in high school relations, alumni affairs, press, radio, television, visual aids, fund raising, and other areas of public relations.

Mr. Blaser has been executive secretary of the alumni and director of alumni affairs since last September. He has had considerable experience in public information and college development work.

At the time he returned to USAC last year, he was serving as special supervisor of the industrial training service for the California State Department of Education.

Other positions he has held include principal of the evening school and director of apprenticeship at Salt Lake Area vocational school; assistant superintendent of Ogden city schools, coordinator of vocational education in Ogden, and director of vocational education at Weber College.

From 1947-49 he was educational specialist with the Institute of Inter-American Affairs in Brazil.

Vocational School Rolls Are Highest on Record

People who work with their hands for a living are attending school in greater numbers than ever before if enrollment at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School is any indication. By mid-week, enrollment at the school was the highest on record.

School officials said it was at least 30 per cent higher than in any previous year. By Wednesday evening a day school enrollment of 375 was reported. Night school enrollment was at 275. Lloyd V. Tilt, supervisor of the evening program, said that within a week or two he expected the evening enrollment to be more than 400.

Jay L. Nelson, school president, said some classes already were operating at maximum loads.

Classes in barbering and auto mechanics are jammed, Mr. Nelson said. Other classes at or near their maximums are business practices and practical nursing.

The sheet metal class is the largest night class. School officials report that local industrial firms are turning to the vocational school for help. They say that many firms pay all tuition costs for certain of their employees. Some even pay wages to employes for time spent at the school, school leaders said.

Students in the automotive and Diesel classes found new and improved facilities. School officials said the school had the most modern facilities for that type of instruction to be found in the city.

Heavy Signup Seen for Trade School

Anticipating the largest student body in its history, Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, will open for its sixth year Thursday for day school classes and Sept. 14 for evening classes, Jay L. Nelson, president, announced Saturday.

Applicants for both day and evening classes may register from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. beginning Tuesday. Registration hours Saturday will be from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

Cecil O. Samuelson, day school supervisor, said the day program is geared to meet demands for individuals interested in trade preparatory training.

Courses are planned in appliance repair, architectural drafting, auto body repair and painting, automobile mechanics, barbering, business practice, cabinet making and carpentry, commercial art, cosmetology, Diesel mechanics, electricity, food hostess training, machine shop, practical nursing, radio and television, tailoring and welding.

Instruction in 20 different subjects is scheduled to begin the evening of Sept. 14.

$400 IN PRIZES

Judges Name 3 Winners In Floor Plan Contest

After sifting through hundreds of sets of plans submitted by amateur architects residing throughout Utah, judges Sunday completed selection of winners in the "Model Floor Plan" contest sponsored by The Salt Lake Tribune and the Utah Home Builders Assn.

The winners: William N. Thuesen, 24, 263 E. 5th South, awarded first prize of $200 in cash.

Mrs. Dorothy H. Erickson, 38, 544 E. 6th North, Logan, awarded second prize of $150 in cash.

Mrs. Louise L. Page, 16, 4490 13th East, awarded third prize of $50 in cash.

300 Enter Contest

The winners were selected from more than 300 Utahns who submitted entries in the contest, which opened Sept. 19 as a feature of Utah Home Week.

Object of the contest was to encourage amateur home planners to put their "dream home" ideas on paper by submitting plans for a home containing six rooms and two bathrooms.

Professional architects, draftsmen and others engaged in the home designing business were ineligible in the contest, and the judges chose the winners on practical home plans rather than on artistic merit of the sketches.

Judges were Miss Nancy Finch, home economist; William Rowe Smith, architect, and Milton L. Fullmer, chief architect for the F.H.A. in Utah.

Studying Drafting

Mr. Thuesen said his check will be used for a trip and to further his study of drafting, a subject which he has been studying as a student at the Salt Lake area vocational school for the past few months. He supports himself for his schooling by working as a waiter in a Salt Lake cafe, and plans to use his G. I. education benefits to attend an architectural school. He is a recently discharged Army veteran.

Mrs. Erickson, wife of Sylvan Erickson of Logan, was among more than 50 contestants residing outside the Salt Lake area.

D NEWS 10-28-53 School Proposed As Office Space

The State of Utah could obtain 3,500 square feet of usable office space on the second floor of a building at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 S. 6th East St., for $10,000—the sum needed to remodel the space.

James A. Wade, construction superintendent for the state building board, made this report Tuesday to the Board of Examiners. The cost would be low for this space, he said.

The examiners instructed Atty. Gen. E. R. Callister to investigate possible ways of obtaining the money. The space is needed badly to house the office and laboratory of the state chemist and certain other offices now at the state capitol.

Mr. Callister also was asked to confer with O. A. Wiesley, chairman of the State Industrial Commission, on possibilities of housing the Department of Employment Security at the vocational school.

Rental for Employment Security Division offices at 174 Motor Ave. is paid by the federal government. This sum conceivably could be used to help finance the remodeling operations, the examiners believed.

D NEWS 10-18-53 Examiners Move To Acquire New Space for Offices

Atty. Gen. E. R. Callister was instructed by the Board of Examiners Tuesday to prepare a bill which would appropriate $10,000 for converting space at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School for state office purposes.

James A. Wade, construction superintendent for the state building board, previously had reported to the examiners that 3,500 square feet of usable office space could be provided on the second floor of a building at the Vocational School for that sum.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee said that "if any money is left after the special session gets through providing for school teachers we will have this bill introduced."

The board made no comment concerning a letter from J. O. Jones, chairman of the vocational school's board of control, protesting against possible use of school property to house other state agencies. Mr. Jones said the vocational school intended to utilize the space in question for classrooms in future years.

Welding Class Mapped

An evening welding program will begin at Cyprus High School on Monday, Dec. 7, in co-operation with the Granite School District, Jay L. Nelson, president of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, said Thursday. D. New 11/25/53

Withdraw State's Part Of Vocational Setup

In addition, I recommend that State support for the operation and support of the Central Area and Salt Lake Area Vocational Schools be withdrawn effective next June, and that the properties be made available to the school districts in the respective areas for their use. Vocational education is conducted in all school districts, the costs of which are included in the minimum school program. Should the districts in the Salt Lake and Provo areas find it desirable to combine their resources with necessary tuitions and fees and continue the operation of the area vocational schools, I would have no objection. It does not seem proper to me, however, that vocational education in these two areas should be a state responsibility when the districts in all other areas accept the responsibility as their own.

I realize the sentiment that is attached to all of these schools particularly in the college communities of Price, Ephraim, and St. George. The employees of the schools particularly would oppose any change in the school status. However, they should not have difficulty finding other employment in the school system in view of the complaints of a teacher shortage. There are times when government or a school program must be trimmed to fit what the people can afford. This State is now supporting a university, an agricultural college, five junior colleges, two vocational schools, two schools for the handicapped, a school for youth correction and a school for mental deficient. The elimination of three of the five junior colleges will have the effect of strengthening the remaining institutions while at the same time releasing needed State funds for use elsewhere. A precedent for this action was established in Idaho several years ago when two junior colleges were abolished. Inasmuch as our financial situation, as measured in tax load and ability to pay, is somewhat worse than Idaho's, I feel the necessity of our action is every bit as great as that which motivated our sister state.

Drop Junior Colleges To Aid Schools, Lee Asks Legislators

Talk Also Urges Vocation Cuts To Increase Classroom Fund

TRIB

By O. N. Malmquist
Tribune Political Editor

Gov. J. Bracken Lee Friday recommended to the special session of the Utah Legislature that three junior colleges be abandoned after this school year and state aid be withdrawn from two vocational schools as a means of providing more funds for the elementary and secondary school system.

The governor recommended that the state-supported program be increased to the level proposed by the Legislative Council ($4,550 per classroom unit) but would make all but two per cent of the leeway above that level subject to approval of taxpayers through a local election.

Integrate Retirement

He recommended integration of the state teacher retirement system with federal Social Security, but on a basis that would provide a somewhat smaller benefit than the plan recommended by the Legislative Council.

The governor again denounced tactics used by professional school people, charging that some education leaders are waging a campaign to silence any criticism of the schools by publicly branding the critics as "enemies of education."

Specifically, the governor offered these recommendations in his third supplemental message to the special session.

Drop Colleges

1. Discontinuance next June of Carbon, Snow and Dixie Junior Colleges and withdrawal at the same time of state support from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School and the Central Utah Vocational School in Provo.

2. Elimination of state support for the school lunch program and transfer of the four per cent liquor tax used for this purpose to the uniform school fund.

3. Submission to the electorate of a constitutional amendment to abolish constitutional earmarking of funds and permit all state revenues to flow into the general fund for appropriation by the Legislature.

100% Retire Plan

4. Adoption of the so-called 100 per cent plan of state retirement—federal Social Security integration, which would provide a maximum benefit of $171.43 per month after 40 years of service.

The governor's recommendations on state support of the school program included:

1. To change computation of number of classroom units, the basis of fund allocations, from past year enrollment to current year enrollment. This, the governor said, would provide an additional $935,000 for this year.

2. That this $935,000 be raised by borrowing from the $2,157,000 regular session appropriation to the school building fund.

3. That the uniform local school levy, which is now the levy required in the richest district to raise the basic or minimum program, be changed to 10 mills for a $3,450 per classroom unit program and graduated program.

Cigaret Tax Hike Okehed; Lee Asks People's 'Vote'

Senate Sets Public Hearing On Junior College Issue

By O. N. Malmquist
Tribune Political Editor

The Utah Senate Tuesday again deferred action on the sizzling junior college bill to give opponents a public hearing, passed bills on final reading to double the cigaret tax and to provide for withholding of state income tax from wages and salaries.

The House, meanwhile, spent most of the day waiting for Senate action and gubernatorial vetoes and, because its calendar was clear, adjourned until Thursday at 10 a.m.

Public hearing on the bill that would transfer Weber, Snow and Dixie Colleges back to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will begin Wednesday at 9 a.m. in the Senate chamber.

Then the Senate will take the bill up as a special order of business at 11 a.m.

Bitter Debate

The public hearing was requested by the Ogden Chamber of Commerce and granted by the Senate on a voice vote. The actions were taken after a bitter debate in which opponents of the measure denounced the proposal as "shot-gun legislation," "tyrannical," "unconstitutional and undemocratic," "morally wrong and ethically improper."

Two test votes on amendments indicated that proponents of the bill were in the majority Tuesday. One vote—on an amendment to cure constitutional defects—was 13 to 10 in favor of the proponents. On another roll-call, the body rejected 14 to 9 an amendment proposed by the opponents to make the transfer a year later, or after the next regular session of the Legislature meets.

Cigaret Tax

The cigaret tax increase and the income tax withholding measures were whooped through with majorities more than large enough to override gubernatorial vetoes. Their purpose is to provide additional money already voted for the schools so that the increase will not automatically fall on property.

The withholding measure will require taxpayers to pay two years' income tax during 1954 and will provide the Uniform School Fund with a first-quarter windfall of about $1 million.

The cigaret tax bill increases the levy from 2 to 4 cents a package and earmarks the revenue raised by the increase for the Uniform School Fund. The 2-cent tax is producing slightly more than $1 million a year. The new tax is expected to produce in excess of $2 million unless the higher tax reduces consumption or increases tax evasion through purchases in other states with a lower tax or no tax.

Promises Veto

Both tax measures have now been approved by both houses. Gov. Lee has said he will veto the cigaret tax but has not committed himself on the income tax withholding.

Four votes were cast against the withholding measure—Pres. Mark Paxton (R., Fillmore), Dilworth S. Woolley (R., Salt Lake), J. Francis Fowles (D., Ogden)

UTAH SENATE ACTION

Public Hearing Set on College Issue

and C. Taylor Burton (R., Salt Lake).

The Senate also passed on final reading two measures (HB 40 and 41) to validate special improvement district bond issues, including the Salt Lake County suburban sewer project.

Debate on the emotion-charged junior college bill was opened by Sen. Orval Hafen (R., St. George), the sponsor, who read legal opinions on the constitutionality of the measure by the attorney general's office and the private law firm of Ray, Quinney & Nebeker.

Meets Clair

Sen. Hafen took the position that his proposed amendments providing for sale of the property to the L.D.S. Church would completely meet any claims of unconstitutionality. Sen. Fowles insisted that amendments would not cure its constitutional defects.

The vote on the Hafen amendments, generally regarded as a test but not necessarily the exact division on the measure, was: For: Burton, Cannon, Clegg, Day, Hafen, Hammond, Kerr, Muir, Stringham, Thorn, Tietjen, Woolley, Paxton. Against: Adams, Fowles, Gibson, Hopkin, Jenkins, Mabey, Openshaw, Selvin, Tippetts, Watson.

Sen. Rendell N. Mabey (R., Bountiful), one of the leaders in the fight against the bill, proposed an amendment to change the date for termination of state support from July 1, 1954, to July 1, 1955, which would be after the next regular session of the Legislature.

Same Division

The division against this was the same as for the Hafen amendment, except Sen. Alonzo F. Hopkin (D., Woodruff) voted with proponents of the bill to reject the amendment by 14 to 9.

Sen. Mabey, in urging adoption of his amendment, said it would be unfair to act on so important an issue during a special session.

Sen. Marl D. Gibson (D., Price) said the members of the Senate were sitting in judgment on the schools and were in no position at this time to render a fair verdict.

He said it was his understanding that a Republican majority was committed in advance to support the bill. To force a decision on that basis, he declared, was morally wrong and ethically improper.

He complimented Sen. Mabey for waging a fight to leave a final decision to the next regular session and said those members who were "bound to vote for the bill should become unbound." He declared that the people and the schools involved were entitled to the "independent judgment of the Senate" and that the members should not be rubber stamps for the governor.

Sen. Sol J. Selvin (D., Tooele) denounced the whole procedure as undemocratic and tyrannical.

Sen. L. Rulon Jenkins (D., Plain City) said at one point that Sen. Hafen seemed to be talking with "absolute authority" regarding future plans for the institutions and he challenged his authority. Pres. Paxton cautioned the members against impugning motives and Sen. Jenkins withdrew his challenge. Sen. Hafen said he would give the source of his authority if he ever got a chance to debate the bill itself.

Sen. Clifton G. M. Kerr (R., Tremonton) offered the motion to give opponents a two-hour public hearing. Sen. Gibson sought to change the time to Wednesday afternoon, but was voted down by the Republican side of the chamber.

Sen. Jenkins said if proponents were unwilling to change their minds, a hearing would be a mockery of the democratic processes. Sen. Kerr replied that if there was any mockery, it was in the request of the Ogden Chamber of Commerce that the hearing be set for next Monday or later.

The body adjourned until 8:45 a.m. Wednesday.

The House, which has bypassed its tax bills pending further clarification of the fiscal situation, worked on only a few minor measures before knocking off early in the afternoon because of a work shortage.

Two Senate bills calling for appropriations to the state building fund—$70,000 to remodel College of Southern Utah's heating plant and $10,000 to convert the unused second floor of Salt Lake Area Vocational School into state office space—were approved by the lower chamber.

But a House bill that would have permitted the use of saccharine in dietary foods died 22 to 31. Advocated as an aid to diabetics, the proposal was beaten down by a coalition of opponents who (1) feared the impact upon the sugar beet industry or (2) did not consider the subject urgent enough for special session action.

Transfer of Junior Colleges Okehed; Vote Overrides Teacher Bill Veto

Senators Defeat Measure To Close Carbon School

By O. N. Malmquist
Tribune Political Editor

Both houses of Utah's Legislature Thursday passed the bill to transfer Weber, Dixie and Snow Colleges to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and voted to override Gov. J. Bracken Lee's veto of bills setting up a new teacher retirement system.

After passing the measure (SB 39) to divest the state of the three colleges, the Senate proceeded to kill bills to discontinue Carbon Junior College and to withdraw state aid from the Salt Lake Area Vocation School and the Central Utah Vocational School in Provo.

Defeat of the bills to free the state from responsibility for Carbon College and the vocational schools provoked an outburst of charges of inconsistency and log-rolling from opponents of the bill to turn the three colleges over to the church.

Oppose Closing of Carbon College

Republicans who voted to transfer the three colleges and then voted to continue Carbon College defended their action on the ground that in the one instance the closing of a school was involved, whereas in the other instance the schools would continue operations under the church.

In the Senate, the college transfer bill was passed by a 14 to 9 vote. All of the supporters were Republicans except one—Sen. Alonzo H. Hopkin (D., Woodruff). Two Republicans—Sen. Rendell N. Mabey (R., Bountiful) and Sen. Frank M. Openshaw (R., Salt Lake) joined seven Democrats in opposition to the bill.

In the House, the measure passed by a vote of 34 to 23 with three absent. All the 34 affirmative votes were cast by Republicans. The against vote was cast by 20 Democrats and three Republicans—Rep. Kleon Kerr (R., Box Elder), Rep. Fred Froerer Jr. (R., Weber) and Rep. Lester Taylor (R., Summit).

GOP Favors Bill

The Senate vote killing the bill to discontinue Carbon College, as was recommended by Gov. Lee, was 9 to 11 with three absent. All nine of the votes to discontinue the school were cast by Republicans. The vote on the vocational school bill was 6 to 14 with three absent. During the Senate debate, Pres. Paxton reminded senators of a rule prohibiting members from impugning motives of fellow members. Charges of inconsistency and responding to outside pressures had begun flying.

Sen. J. Francis Fowles (D., Ogden) aimed some barbs at Salt Lake and Utah County senators who voted to transfer Weber College to the LDS Church and then voted against withdrawing state aid from vocational schools in those counties.

Sen. Elias L. Day (R., Salt Lake) who voted to transfer the three colleges to the church, voted to close Carbon College and voted against withdrawing state aid from the vocational schools.

Republicans who voted in favor of the state's dropping all four junior colleges and the vocational schools were Pres. Paxton, Fillmore; Dilworth S. Woolley, Salt Lake City; H. Roland Tietjen, Monroe; B. H. Stringham, Vernal; Vern B. Muir, Logan; and Edwin B. Cannon, Salt Lake City.

Roll Call Vote

The Senate roll call on the vote to transfer the three colleges to the church follows:

For: Burton, Cannon, Clegg, Day, Hafen, Hammond, Hopkin, Kerr, Muir, Stringham, Thorn, Tietjen, Woolley, Paxton.

Against: Adams, Fowles, Gibson, Jenkins, Mabey, Openshaw, Selvin, Tippetts, Watson.

For: R. Clair Anderson, William E. Anderson, Barlow, Brian, Brotherson, Bunderson, Butters, Conover, Crofts, Dalebout, Harold V. Davis, Dunn, Durham, Esplin, Fullmer, Gardner, Gunther, Hopkins, Jacobson, John H. Johnson, Lawrence B. Johnson, Jones, C. Wilford Larsen, Charles E. Peterson, Lionel L. Peterson, Wangsgaard, Poulson, Sanders, Sevy, Sheffield, G. Douglas Taylor, Thomas, Young, Merrill K. Davis.

Against: Cazier, Cope, Elsworth, Frandsen, Froerer, Grover, Henderson, Howe, Jack, Kerr, Edward C. Larsen, W. G. (Bill) Larson, Lowe, Lundell, Messinger, Palmer, Redd, Rowberry, Russell, Spence, Lester Taylor, Vance, West.

Absent: Monson, Patterson, White.

In both Houses, opponents of the college transfer measure made stubborn fights to defeat the measure. On the Senate side, Sen. Hopkin, who supported the bill, made a final effort to soothe injured feelings by offering an amendment to make the effective date of the transfer on June 30, 1955 (after the next regular session of the Legislature).

Lines Held Firm

The amendment was originally offered by Sen. Mabey, a Republican. Lines held firm and opponents, seeing that it was impossible to stop the measure in the Senate, let it go to the roll call.

In the House, all the amendments offered and defeated in the Senate were re-offered along with some new ones. Opponents tried to get another public hearing and demanded roll calls at every opportunity.

Tabling Effort

Efforts were made to remove Weber College from the bill and to table it. Another proposed amendment would have required the State Board of Examiners, in the event of a sale of properties to the church, to obtain a minimum of 75 per cent of the state's investment in the properties. The battle lasted for three long hours before the supporters could get the issue to a roll call.

Some of the senators said they had hoped the issue could be settled by a referendum of the voters, but concluded that only the people could initiate such a move. Sen. Edward H. Watson (D., Salt Lake City) said he expected the people to initiate a referendum.

"They are not going to stand for this sort of monkey work by a group like ourselves," he said.

A check of the Finance Commission showed that unexpended appropriations for the three colleges as of Dec. 4 totaled $1,269,338, divided as follows: Weber, $932,182; Snow, $170,500; Dixie, $166,655.

Utahn Chosen Vocational Group Chief

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 (AP)—The American Vocational Assn. at its closing convention session Friday named as president, Mark Nichols of Salt Lake City, director of vocational education for Utah.

Nichols, who succeeds Martha Croighton of Blacksburg, Va., had been serving as vice president for agriculture of the A.V.A.

Charles Sylvester of Baltimore, Md., was re-elected treasurer for the 27th year.

The 1954 convention will be held in San Francisco the first week in December.

Mark Nichols, director of vocational education for Utah since 1949, has been with the State Department of Public Instruction since 1937, except for a year's leave of absence as director of youth education for the American Institute of Cooperation.

It was during that year (1948) that he toured agricultural education schools in most of the 48 states and achieved a national reputation as a leader in his field. In Utah, he holds the dual position as director of vocational agriculture.

For the past year, he has been vice president of the American Vocational Assn. agriculture department. A graduate of Utah State Agricultural College, he taught vocational agriculture at Weston, Ida., and Bear River High School, Tremonton, Box Elder County.

Achievements Accrue From Hectic Session

Like an oldtime melodrama, the "school crisis" session of the Utah Legislature rang down the curtain on a happy note Saturday night after 19 days and some nights of anguished controversy and uncertainty.

One of the longest special sessions on record was marked by kaleidoscopic changes, frustration, intense pressures and bitterness. But when the smoke had cleared away, the primary purposes of the special session had been achieved. The state public school financing program was liberalized by an 11th hour compromise of the compromises, and a sound teacher retirement system arranged. The latter was passed over Governor Lee's veto.

Principal casualty of the emotion-rocked session was the state's junior college system. At the end of the current school year three state junior colleges—Weber at Ogden, Dixie at St. George and Snow at Ephraim will revert to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which owned and operated them prior to the early 1930s, and Carbon at Price will be closed. Details of the transfer, including clearing up of some constitutional points, remain to be worked out.

A little more than 50 bills and resolutions were approved, about that number were filed in each house, most of which were duplications. Hardly a dozen of them could be considered urgent enough for special session consideration but many were in a "package" which the governor demanded in connection with the financing program.

Junior College Bombshell

The session started out in an atmosphere of conflict and recrimination with Governor Lee blasting at the "educational lobby" and feeding the lawmakers, at the outset, a number of non-emergency items, several which failed to pass. When the really vital issues were presented and it became clear the majority of the lawmakers favored the Legislative Council-approved plans over the less-generous "compromises" submitted by the Governor, Mr. Lee tossed in the bombshell that was heard in the four corners of Utah. He first proposed withholding state funds from Dixie and Snow and turning their properties over to the Church and Carbon to Carbon County district. Then it was announced that while Church authorities were not seeking return of the colleges, it would accept them only as a package, including Weber. This brought a storm of opposition from prominent Weber County residents. Carbon County representatives also protested abandonment of their school. Despite the furore those phases of Mr. Lee's economy proposals were approved, although the vocational schools at Provo and Salt Lake, also marked by Mr. Lee for the state rejection, escaped the axe.

The Salt Lake Tribune has held throughout the controversy that the action at this time was bad public policy, that it should not have been taken in haste at a special session, especially while junior college administration was before the Legislative Council for study. Repercussions from this likely will be carried into future legislative sessions and political elections.

Teachers' Pension Plan Laudable

We applaud the action on the school retirement system. With the state deficit approaching $14 million and the pension plan otherwise shaky, we are happy to see teacher pensions integrated with the federal Social Security system. The plan, as worked out by the Legislative Council, is no doubt, worth the cost of the special session. It should restore confidence and good morale to many teachers and adoption of this more generous of the alternates is expected to forestall a rash of immediate retirements, more than 30 in Salt Lake City alone.

Likewise, there is much to be said for the compromise school finance plan as approved by the lawmakers with the understanding Governor Lee will permit it to become a law without his signature. The program provides $4,860 per classroom unit in the schools compared with $4,620 at present. This amount may be raised to $5,508 by approval of taxpayers in the various districts at special elections, with the level maintained until changed by a future election or by the Legislature.

A number of Utah districts are expected to call elections. Salt Lake City officials are still studying legislative action but a proposal to raise the school fund likely will be submitted next year. Under the financing plan, the Board of Education will be able to increase employe salaries and retain essential school services.

More Financial Responsibility

The Legislature approved $1,525,000 for immediate aid to the schools and pay increases may be effective for the remainder of the school year. School financial gains are offset somewhat by other bills passed which increase school district expenses. One requires full-day class sessions to qualify for state aid, and this will result in 50 additional first grade units in Salt Lake City alone. Another requires school districts to share with other units the expense of collecting taxes, and another reduces state aid going to districts receiving special federal aid.

The new legislation puts more emphasis upon local effort and responsibility, as against state aid. This is in keeping with the philosophy of state and national administrations. The Legislature acted to encourage merit and dependency pay, without forcing it on the schools.

Major failures were rejection of a constitutional amendment resolution providing for additional consolidation of school districts, notably where wealthy and poor districts adjoin. This resulted mainly from rural fears of loss of state aid, and the same rural-urban tensions made it inexpedient to ask for reconsideration of the reapportionment plan, heavily weighted in favor of rural counties. This was passed by the last Legislature and due to be voted on at the polls at the November, 1954 elections. The Salt Lake Tribune is convinced that this is a dangerous plan and should be defeated.

The Legislature approved a two-cent increase in the two-cent state tax on cigarettes over the Governor's veto, but the legality of the action awaits testing in view of the Governor's claim that it was improper legislation since he did not put the matter on the agenda. An income tax withholding provision was properly killed.

Salt Lake Benefited

Outside the field of education, the Legislature ranged from the vital to the inconsequential, congratulating those responsible for a football game telecast, making prize fighting legal and legalizing a 4-mill special tax levy for essential sanitation work under way in Salt Lake City. The latter facilitates sewer and water treatment without restricting the overall tax levy ceiling. The lawmakers are commended also for acting to legalize the Salt Lake Metropolitan sewer district's bond issue and a Provo bond issue, and for providing funds for protecting Utah's interests in the Colorado and Virgin Rivers.

Aside from the ramifications of the junior college action, the achievements of the special session were notable, considering strong disagreements on basic issues between the Republican Governor and Republican Legislature. These achievements should lessen the burdens of the regular 1954 session of the Legislature.

Now we hope bitterness will subside and all concerned will work for the overall benefit of the people of Utah.

Financing, College Bills Lead Disputed Issues

By O. N. Malmquist
Tribune Political Editor

Utah's Legislature adjourned Saturday at 7:30 p.m. after a hectic 19-day special session in which legislation was passed to liberalize the school financing program and to discontinue the state's junior college system.

Major actions of the session, which brought frequent collisions between the Republican controlled Legislature and Republican Gov. J. Bracken Lee, were:

1. Enactment of a compromise school financing program on the final day after a program recommended by the State Legislative Council had been killed by the sustaining of a gubernatorial veto in the Senate.

Vote to Discontinue Carbon College

2. Passage on the final day of a bill to discontinue Carbon College as a state supported institution at the end of the current school year.

3. Passage, after a bitter fight, of a bill to transfer Weber, Dixie and Snow Colleges to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints at the end of the current school year.

4. Enactment over gubernatorial vetoes of two bills to integrate the State Teacher Retirement System with Federal Social Security on a so-called 70 per cent offset basis recommended by the Legislative Council.

$1.5 Million Fund

5. Appropriation of $1,525,000 from the mine occupation tax reserve fund to the Uniform School Fund to provide increases for the current school year of substantially the same size as contemplated in the new financing program.

6. Passage over the governor's veto of a bill to increase the cigaret tax from two to four cents and to earmark the increase for the Uniform School Fund.

7. Passage of a bill to permit Salt Lake City to levy a four-mill sewer and water tax without restriction by the over-all levy ceiling. The levy was approved by the last regular session but subsequently knocked out by the court which held it could be levied only within the over-all limitation.

Session's Hottest Issue

The hottest issue of the session was the surprise junior college package first thrown in by Gov. J. Bracken Lee in the form of a recommendation that Dixie, Snow and Carbon colleges be discontinued as state institutions at the end of the school year. Later he sent in a recommendation that three colleges—Weber, Dixie and Snow—be returned to the original donor—the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He explained that he was changing his recommendation because the Church, while not seeking the schools, would take them back and operate them if the Legislature withdrew state support.

The governor also recommended discontinuance of Carbon College, which the Legislature carried out after a bitter fight, and withdrawal of state aid from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School and Central Vocational School in Provo, which was rejected by the law-

Sustain Funds Veto

The compromise school financing bill passed by both houses Saturday was dropped into the hopper after the Senate sustained the governor's veto of the program recommended by the Legislative Council. The veto was upheld by the bare one-third majority of eight, all Republicans. The compromise bill provided a basic, supplemental and local leeway program between that recommended by the Legislative Council and that recommended by Gov. Lee.

Republicans who voted to sustain the veto were Burton, Hafen, Kerr, Muir, Openshaw, Stringham, Woolley and Paxton. Voting to override were seven Democrats and the following Republicans: Cannon, Clegg, Day, Hammond, Mabey and Thorn. One Democrat (Gibson) and one Republican (Tietjen) were absent at the time of the roll call.

The cigaret tax increase got caught in an on-again, off-again routine after the governor sent it back to the House with a veto Saturday afternoon.

Democrats, with the help of a few Republicans, first voted HCR 3 (E. C. Larsen) Congratulating President Dwight D. Eisenhower for his recent speech before the United Nations.

MORE, LESS

School Funds Bill Called 'Compromise'

The school finance bill passed by Utah's Legislature Saturday was a compromise between the Legislative Council and Gov. J. Bracken Lee. It was closer, however, to the council than to the governor's recommendations.

By way of comparison, the maximum amounts per classroom unit without an election are:

Compromise bill adopted	$4,860
Council bill	5,002
Governor's bill	4,617
Present	4,620
Maximum amounts per classroom unit with an election are:
Compromise bill	$5,508
Council bill	5,407
Governor's bill	5,265
Present	4,950

All plans provide for a basic state-supported program of $4,050 per classroom or distribution unit. The compromise plan permits a district to go 20 per cent above that (12 per cent of which is the state-supported supplemental program) or 5 mills, whichever is greater, without an election.

The council plan would permit an additional 23½ per cent or 6 mills without an election and the governor's plan would permit 14 per cent or 4 mills without an election.

An additional 16 per cent is permitted under the compromise adopted with an election as compared to 10 per cent under the council plan and 16 per cent under the governor's plan. Thus the compromise plan permits a lower amount than the council plan in the absence of an election, but a higher amount than the council plan with an election.

Office Quarters Go Begging at Vocation School

Prospective quarters for state offices at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, went begging Wednesday.

Although the special session of the 1953 Legislature appropriated $10,000 for remodeling the second floor of one of the school buildings to provide state office space, there were no takers.

Wendell L. Cottrell, Board of Examiners clerk, reported that plans to move the state chemist's office and laboratory to the school have struck a $12,000 snag.

It would cost that sum, James A. Wade, construction superintendent for the State Building Board, estimated, to build new cabinets and facilities to accommodate the chemist. Present cupboards, once removed from the State Capitol, would have little salvage value, he said. The entire cost of the move, therefore, would be at least $22,000.

The State Adult Probation and Parole Board, now housed in rented quarters in the Utah Savings and Trust Co. Building, reported to Mr. Cottrell that to have parolees reporting at the vocational school would be undesirable.

The upshot was that the Board of Examiners will not spend the $10,000 to remodel the school building second floor, at least for the present.

...sistant director, and moved is a certainty."

Vocational Education Conference Set

Annual vocational education conference for the Salt Lake area will be held Feb. 10, it was announced Thursday by Mark Nichols, state director for vocational education. The conference will be held from 4:30 to 9 p.m. at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

APPRENTICESHIP IN UTAH

Stephen J. Beeley
University of Utah

APPRENTICESHIP had its official beginnings in Utah in 1937 when the Federal Bureau of Apprenticeship was established by law. At this time a field office was set up in Salt Lake City. The objectives of the bureau were, and still are, to encourage the use of apprenticeship as a means of training skilled workers in apprenticeable occupations, to set minimum recommended standards of training, to encourage compliance on the part of industry with the standards, to act as an approval and registration agency for apprenticeship agreements, and to issue certificates of completion to apprentices upon their successful completion of their programs in states which do not have agencies set up for this purpose.

In 1949 the Utah State Legislature passed Chapter Fifty of the Session Laws of Utah establishing the Utah State Apprenticeship Council and placing it under the jurisdiction of the State Industrial Commission. This law was patterned after the federal statutes and set the same basic minimum standards for training. To meet the requirements established by this law an apprentice training program must contain provision for the following:

1. A minimum age of sixteen years for the apprentice.
2. A schedule of work processes or operations in which experience is to be given the apprentice on the job.
3. A progressively increasing schedule of wages to be paid the apprentice.
4. 144 hours of related classroom instruction for each year of apprenticeship.
5. Adequate supervision of the apprentice and the keeping of appropriate records of his progress.
6. Joint establishment of the program by both the employer and the employees.
7. Some indication that the number of apprentices to be trained conforms to the need in the community.
8. Registration of the apprenticeship standards with the State Apprenticeship Council.
9. Registration of each apprenticeship agreement with the State Apprenticeship Council.

EDUCATION

The Governor & the Schools

J. Bracken Lee, Republican governor of Utah, is a blunt, stubborn individualist with a passion for economy. He has cut off state aid to such projects as the Utah Symphony Orchestra, and has slashed the state's social-security program. He was the only governor in the nation who refused to declare a United Nations Day. He has consistently fought any increase in taxes, no matter what the need might be. But of all the stands that Lee has taken, none has stirred such storms as his attitude towards Utah's public schools.

In the past few years, Utah's schools have been showing definite signs of malnutrition. Utah ranks 37th in the U.S. in the amount spent on each pupil, and while enrollments have been rising at the rate of 5,000 a year, the number of teachers graduating from the state's teachers' colleges has been dropping at the rate of about 200 a year. Last summer, angered over their salaries, 400 teachers quit their jobs in disgust, and last fall Utah barely escaped a general teachers' strike. Even prosperous Salt Lake City has felt the pinch: its schools have been so short of funds that they had to abandon their home-study program for blind and crippled children.

For Economy. Governor Lee has remained adamant. In 1951 he vetoed a bill to up per-classroom funds by $300; then he vetoed another bill to up funds by $200. Meanwhile, he appointed a committee to study school costs, but when the committee's report came in, urging bigger appropriations, he scorned it. Not until last month did he call a special session of the legislature to cope with the school crisis. It was then that the governor's troubles really began.

UTAH'S LEE
TIME, JANUARY 11, 1954

At the opening of the session, Lee indicated that he saw little reason for all the fuss. Though he did eventually recommend a slight increase for the schools, he seemed to have all sorts of other matters on his mind. Among other things, he wanted the legislature to provide uniform textbooks for the state, to forbid teachers to engage in politics while under contract, and to put their salary raises on a merit basis, rather than on a basis of degrees and seniority. He accused the Utah Education Association of being nothing but a pressure group, said that the state P.T.A. was nothing but its "echo." Finally, just for the sake of economy, Lee made another recommendation: that the state close Carbon Junior College in the town of Price, and that it transfer three other state-supported junior colleges to the Mormon Church.

$200 Raise. Republicans as well as Democrats were upset by some of Lee's suggestions. Instead of setting per-classroom funds at $4,600 as Lee wanted, the legislators slapped on an additional $200. Over the governor's veto, they also passed a 2¢ addition to the cigarette tax, to be turned over to the schools. They postponed Lee's program for merit raises, in effect put Utah's teachers in line for a blanket salary increase of $200. About the only victory Lee won, in fact, was on his recommendation for the four junior colleges. But last week, still singed by the frying pan, Lee found himself in the fire.

To the citizens of Price, the closing of Carbon Junior College came as a bitter blow; they immediately set up a Save-the-College Committee, with Lee's ex-campaign manager at its head. Meanwhile, Weber County also rose up in arms when it heard that its own college, which for years it had hoped to turn into a four-year institution, was to be transferred to the Mormon Church. "I tell you," cried one Weber senator, "that my people are angry." Echoed the Friends of Weber College Committee: "Fear is in the hearts of those who spawned this plot, and our people are aroused as never before."

Last week the two colleges began collecting signatures to a petition to place the whole issue before the electorate. But whatever the outcome, one thing was certain: J. Bracken Lee's political troubles were not yet through.

Salt Lake Area Vocational School, Friday at 8 p.m. will graduate 13 practical nursing students.

Mrs. Mildred D. Rordame, associate professor of nursing, University of Utah, will be principal speaker, said Jay Nelson, school president.

Graduating are: Phyllis Byron, Whittier, Cal.; Evelyn Steed, Antimony, Garfield County; Mrs. Beatrice Montanye, Moab, Grand County; Mrs. Mabel Obenchain, Stanley, Ida.; Margaret Millett, Provo; Lila Payne, Yuba City, Cal.; Mrs. Lucile Conyers, Elaine Brown, Mrs. Donna Howarth, Mrs. Norma Miller, Mrs. Julia North, Mrs. Ethel Smith and Mrs. Wanda Warner, Salt Lake City.

Vocation School To Graduate 13 Nursing Students

Thirteen practical nursing students of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School will receive diplomas and pins Friday at 8 p.m., during ceremonies of the 10th graduation exercises of the school.

Addressing the group at the school exercises will be Mrs. Mildred Rordame, associate professor of the College of Nursing, University of Utah. A brief welcoming address will be given by Jay Nelson, president, Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

Members of the graduating class are Phyllis Bryon, Whittier, Cal.; Evelyn Steed, Antimony; Mrs. Beatrice Montanye, Moab; Mrs. Mabel Obenchain, Stanley, Ida.; Margaret Millett, Provo; Lila Payne, Yuba City, Cal.; Mrs. Lucile Conyers, Elaine Brown, Mrs. Donna Howarth, Mrs. Norma Miller, Mrs. Julia North, Mrs. Ethel Smith, and Mrs. Wanda Warner, all of Salt Lake City.

Nurses Graduate

Thirteen women were graduated Friday night from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School of Nursing. They were:

Elaine Brown, Lucile Conyers, Donna Howarth, Norma P. Miller, Julia C. North, Ethel J. Smith and Wanda Warner, all of Salt Lake City; Margaret S. Millett, Provo; Beatrice Montanye, Moab; Evelyn Steed, Antimony; Mabel M. Obenchain, Stanley, Ida.; Phyllis Lorraine Byron, Whittier, Cal., and Lila Payne, Yuba City, Cal.

Round Table Speaker

Guest speaker for Salt Lake Round Table luncheon Tuesday will be Jay L. Nelson, director of Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

Mr. Nelson will review school activities for club members at their weekly meeting in Hotel Utah.

The only phase of this program not placed under the State Apprenticeship Council was that of the related instruction for apprentices. The law provides that the state superintendent of public instruction shall provide the related classroom instruction. These related classroom instruction courses are offered at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, at the Central Utah Vocational School in Provo, and at each of the junior colleges.

The Utah State Apprenticeship Council, as established in the law, is composed of six members, three representing labor and three representing management. This council has the responsibility of approving and registering standards for apprenticeship programs; and, also, registering individual apprenticeship agreements or indentures under the standards. The council also has the responsibility of issuing certificates of completion to apprentices upon the successful completion of their programs of on the job and related school training.

The Extent To Which Apprentices Are Being Used In Utah Industry and Business

From the time of its official birth in 1937 until the beginning of World War II the acceptance and growth of the apprenticeship program in Utah was by no means spectacular. This could be attributed to several causes, outstanding among which were the lack of industrialization in the state generally and the comparative lack of strength of the labor movement. The C. I. Bill of Rights with its provision for subsidized on-the-job training for veterans, combined with the rapid industrial expansion of the state during the past ten years has greatly augmented and expanded the program.

According to the biennial report of the Industrial Commission of Utah for the period ending June 30, 1952, there are 416 sets of apprenticeship standards approved and registered with the State Apprenticeship Council; that is, there are 416 individual programs under which an apprentice can train. As of February 25, 1953, there were 986 individual apprentice agreements registered with the council. These are individual trainees reported to be actively pursuing apprentice training programs. It is the opinion of some workers in the field that this figure is from 10 to 20 percent above the actual number because of inadequate communication between the apprentices themselves, the employers, the Apprenticeship Council, and the other federal and state agencies involved, and also insufficient and inadequate records in the field.

The 1952 biennial report of the Industrial Commission lists sixty different occupations in which 688 apprentices completed their training during the period from April 1, 1950 to June 30, 1952 in the entire state. Some of the occupations listed in the report are: automobile mechanic, baker, carpenter, electrician, glazier, iron worker, machinist, optician, photographer, printer, saddlemaker, shoe repairman, and watchmaker.

Tentative Conclusions

There has been a question in the minds of industrial leaders for a long time regarding the future of apprenticeship as a means of training new workers for skilled jobs. Through specialization and standardization in industry many of the skilled trades have been broken down to the point where they are hardly recognizable as anything more than merely operative jobs. The place of the so-called all-around mechanic in industry is slowly fading into the background. Another criticism of apprenticeship is that it takes a tremendous amount of time to train a worker. The average apprenticeship is four years in length. Still another criticism is that, unless the apprentice program is closely supervised and the apprentice is regularly rotated from one job to another the training he receives may be purely coincidental to the work he is producing.

Generally speaking organized labor is in favor of apprenticeship for many reasons, outstanding among which is that the number of new workers coming into the field can be controlled quite effectively. Another is that it tends to give a good deal more status to the skilled workman.

Apprenticeship is definitely not filling the need for skilled workers in industry in Utah today. As an example of this the number of apprentices completing their training in specific occupations between April 1, 1950, and June 30, 1952, a period of over two years is: bakers—2, barbers—9, farm equipment mechanics—6, machinists—17, radio repairmen—2, tool and die makers—1. Completions in these and many other similar occupations are obviously below replacement levels. The picture is somewhat brighter in some other occupations. Some of these are: carpenters—125, electricians—47, painters—36, and plumbers—64. This can be attributed to active labor groups and management associations.

Where are the other skilled tradesmen coming from who are filling the jobs? Many are being imported from outside the state. Many are being trained in what would amount to vestibule training schools within industry. Many others, and this is probably most

The Governor & the Schools

J. Bracken Lee, Republican governor of Utah, is a blunt, stubborn individualist with a passion for economy. He has cut off state aid to such projects as the Utah Symphony Orchestra, and has slashed the state's social-security program. He was the only governor in the nation who refused to declare a United Nations Day. He has consistently fought any increase in taxes, no matter what the need might be. But of all the stands that Lee has taken, none has stirred such storms as his attitude towards Utah's public schools.

In the past few years, Utah's schools have been showing definite signs of malnutrition. Utah ranks 37th in the U.S. in the amount spent on each pupil, and while enrollments have been rising at the rate of 5,000 a year, the number of teachers graduating from the state's teachers' colleges has been dropping at the rate of about 200 a year. Last summer, angered over their salaries, 400 teachers quit their jobs in disgust, and last fall Utah barely escaped a general teachers' strike. Even prosperous Salt Lake City has felt the pinch: its schools have been so short of funds that they had to abandon their home-study program for blind and crippled children.

For Economy. Governor Lee has remained adamant. In 1951 he vetoed a bill to up per-classroom funds by $300; then he vetoed another bill to up funds by $200. Meanwhile, he appointed a committee to study school costs, but when the committee's report came in, urging bigger appropriations, he scorned it. Not until last month did he call a special session of the legislature to cope with the school crisis. It was then that the governor's troubles really began.

Wayne Miller—LIFE

UTAH'S LEE

TIME, JANUARY 11, 1954

At the opening of the session, Lee indicated that he saw little reason for all the fuss. Though he did eventually recommend a slight increase for the schools, he seemed to have all sorts of other matters on his mind. Among other things, he wanted the legislature to provide uniform textbooks for the state, to forbid teachers to engage in politics while under contract, and to put their salary raises on a merit basis, rather than on a basis of degrees and seniority. He accused the Utah Education Association of being nothing but a pressure group, said that the state P.T.A. was nothing but its "echo." Finally, just for the sake of economy, Lee made another recommendation: that the state close Carbon Junior College in the town of Price, and that it transfer three other state-supported junior colleges to the Mormon Church.

$200 Raise. Republicans as well as Democrats were upset by some of Lee's suggestions. Instead of setting per-classroom funds at $4,600 as Lee wanted, the legislators slapped on an additional $200. Over the governor's veto, they also passed a 2¢ addition to the cigarette tax, to be turned over to the schools. They postponed Lee's program for merit raises, in effect put Utah's teachers in line for a blanket salary increase of $200. About the only victory Lee won, in fact, was on his recommendation for the four junior colleges. But last week, still singed by the frying pan, Lee found himself in the fire.

To the citizens of Price, the closing of Carbon Junior College came as a bitter blow; they immediately set up a Save-the-College Committee, with Lee's ex-campaign manager at its head. Meanwhile, Weber County also rose up in arms when it heard that its own college, which for years it had hoped to turn into a four-year institution, was to be transferred to the Mormon Church. "I tell you," cried one Weber senator, "that my people are angry." Echoed the Friends of Weber College Committee: "Fear is in the hearts of those who spawned this plot, and our people are aroused as never before."

Last week the two colleges began collecting signatures to a petition to place the whole issue before the electorate. But whatever the outcome, one thing was certain: J. Bracken Lee's political troubles were not yet through.

BRAND NEW, BUT READY FOR OVERHAUL—This $2,700 diesel engine is brand new, but it soon will be torn down for overhaul by students at Salt Lake Area Vocational School. Parker M. Pratt, left, head of the automotive and diesel department, and LeRoy F. Walters, instructor, examine the new equipment.

New Diesel Faces Overhaul

Vocational Students To Work on Engine

It's fresh from the factory and in perfect condition — but the new $2,700 diesel engine recently received by the Salt Lake Area Vocational School is headed for the repair pit!

Students in the diesel mechanics department soon will be tearing the new engine to pieces. Then when it is all 'broken down' students will examine the parts clean them, and put them back together.

After the job is done the students will test the engine to see that everything works right.

By this method the 16 students in the school's diesel mechanics class will learn the fundamentals of diesel engine repair and overhaul.

Parker M. Pratt, head of the school's automotive and diesel departments, reports that the new engine is of the very latest and most advanced design. Although the engine is smaller, it otherwise is identical to diesel engines used in many trucks and buses.

The equipment was purchased at about one-third its actual value, Mr. Pratt said. It was shipped direct to the school from the General Motors factory. It is a three cylinder, two-cycle engine.

The shiny new engine is in for a life of ups and downs. Students, working in pairs, will tear it down and build it up. The process will be repeated over and over again.

Tanya Gudmundson and Gerald L. Purton begin the task of painting helmets for use by civil defense workers in Utah.

GRATIS PROJECT

Vocation School Painting Civil Defense Helmets

Steel helmets of many colors are being turned out of a paint shop at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

The first of 4,000 World War II helmets assigned to Salt Lake City civil defense are being painted in nine different colors, each designating a different type of volunteer worker.

Maj. Edward Gallagher, director of city civil defense, said the automotive paint shop class at the school, supervised by O. W. Spainhower, is doing the painting job free of charge and expects to be finished with the 4,000-hat order in May.

Standard civil defense colors used to identify different types of workers are: Rescue workers, red; auxiliary police, blue; firemen, black; communications equipment workers, white; welfare workers, green; air raid wardens, brown; engineering workers, gray; medical corpsmen, yellow; members of headquarters staff, aluminum.

It is hoped that later on arrangements can be made to have appropriate lettering placed on each of the helmets, said Maj. Gallagher.

and night classes in business, trade, service, and industrial education. The picture above indicates the wide range of the school's curriculum.

'Shirt Sleeve' Classes

Vocational School Trains Student to Earn Living

By LAVOR K. CHAFFIN

A school that works in its shirt sleeves and isn't afraid to get its hands dirty is helping hundreds of Salt Lake area people acquire or increase skills needed to earn a living.

It's a rough, workaday school. It's filled with the noise of hammers and saws on wood, the clang and clatter of metal on metal.

The acrid smoke of the welders' torch and the penetrating odor of new paint reaches the nostrils in parts of the school. In another section the close, humid smells of the barber and beauty shop easily escape the confines of the thin, makeshift partitions.

There are no long, shining corridors . . . no fancy classrooms with polished desks.

Not Afraid of Dirt

The students are not coeds or college men in the "right" fashions. They don't wear neckties or white shirts. They wear working clothes . . . overalls, coveralls, jeans. They're not afraid to get dirty and grimy, if the class requires it.

The people who attend the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, are not educating only their minds, though that's an important part of their training, they're learning skills with their fingers

. . . the right combination of dexterity and strength.

If you should stop in some day, school president Jay L. Nelson might show you through the sprawling establishment that only a few years ago was a laundry.

Many Pictures

You would come away with a dozen pictures impressed indelibly in your memory.

You'd see white-coated students learning to cut hair. Young, and not-so-young women learning cosmetology, practical nursing, tailoring. Mixed classes—both sexes and all ages—in business practice, commercial art.

There'd be men working on electric motors, radios, television sets. Working and learning the vital skills necessary to keep our complex economy functioning properly.

Perhaps Mr. Nelson would take you out to the auto body and welding shops, or the recently modernized automotive mechanics section where men in grease-stained clothes tear down and then build up complicated gasoline and diesel engines.

The school president, with justifiable pride, would show you the two-bedroom home being built by the school's carpentry class. The attractively arranged house is being built on skids in a vacant area near the school. When finished it will be sold and moved.

In his spacious, but unpretentious office, which also serves as a board room, Mr. Nelson would tell you that at the last count there were 307 day students and 396 night students at the school. The day students study from 8:30 a.m. until 3:15 p.m. At 3:30 p.m. the night students begin taking over. From that time until 10 p.m. various night classes are held.

14-Hour Day

"The school is busy 14 hours a day," Mr. Nelson says. "Of course not all the classes are in session all the time, but the school is open and students are studying." Night classes are under the direction of Lloyd V.

Tilt. Cecil O. Samuelson is supervisor of the day program.

The largest classes are in auto body repair and painting, auto mechanics, electronics and welding. Business practice and carpentry classes are operating at maximum capacity.

"We always have a long waiting list for auto mechanics, auto body repair, carpentry, electronics and business practice," Mr. Nelson states.

And there always is demand for the school's "graduates," Mr. Nelson adds. "We never can meet the demand. It is so great that many students leave before their classes are finished because they find good jobs available."

Reminded that the school has been under attack from some quarters who would withdraw state support from the institution Mr. Nelson countered. "If

HISTORY

The Salt Lake City Plumbers and Steamfitters Joint Apprenticeship Committee was first organized in June, 1943. Participating organizations were the Utah Plumbing and Heating Contractors Association and the United Association of Journeyman Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada, Local Union No. 19.

The original Joint Apprenticeship Committee in cooperation with the Vocational School and the Bureau of Apprenticeship developed apprenticeship covering the plumbing and steamfitting trades. The actual registration of standards was accomplished September 20, 1945. Since that time an attempt has been made to bring all apprentices in Salt Lake area under the terms of these standards. The Salt Lake Area Vocational School has provided related training of the highest type. Apprentices who have completed their apprenticeships under these standards are better equipped to work at the pipe trades than ever before in the history of the plumbing industry in this area. Recently the plumbing and fitting trades, as well as other skills within the industry, have been combined. The committee is now in the process of revising apprenticeship standards in the pipe trades. These standards will cover the entire field of operations so that an apprentice who serves his time will have the skill of the entire industry. The present committee, composed of members from management and labor, is listed below.

S. L. School Due For Supervisors

A six weeks course designed to meet needs of men in supervisory capacities in industry begins Monday at 7 p.m. in Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

Instructing will be James E. Borg, plant training supervisor at Bingham for Kennecott Copper Corp. Fee is $5.

... of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

One of the purposes of this organization is to encourage the training of practical nurses, and thus help relieve the nation's overall nurse shortage. The association also seeks to protect the public from unqualified practitioners in this field.

"Problems of Handling People" will be the subject of a class starting March 1 at 7 p.m. at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

The class will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. for a period of six weeks. Cost will be $5. James E. Borg, plant training supervisor at Bingham for the Kennecott Copper Corp., will be the instructor.

School's nursing program Friday.

Miss Hilda Torrop, executive secretary of the association, and Miss Virginia Mayo, a member of the association's accrediting committee, were to visit the school to decide whether or not the nursing program should receive national accreditation.

The school already has received temporary national accreditation, and this is the final accrediting visit, Mrs. Shirley Collins, director of the school's nursing program, reported.

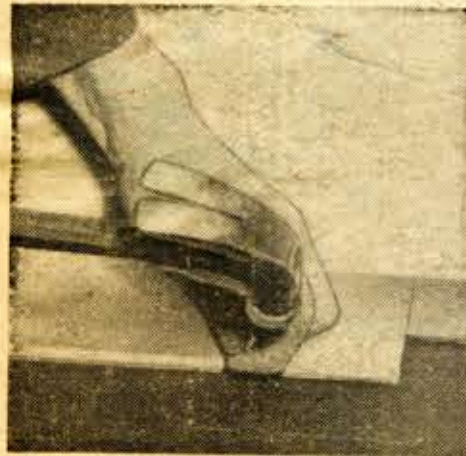

The nursing experts also will visit student nurses training at the LDS and Salt Lake General hospitals, Mrs. Collins said.

The Utah Licensed Practical Nursing Assn. will sponsor a meeting Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the vocational school. Both women will discuss practical nursing on a state and national basis, Mrs. Collins said.

Here's a "don't" — the joints of the flooring are not staggered. Strength and looks both are lost.

Firm pressure on the board with foot or knee, and also on nail will give you the best results.

Here's how the flooring is nailed—at an angle of 50 degrees and through the angle of tongue. Use firm strokes.

If the boards are sprung, you can straighten them in place by using a scrap piece as a pouncing block.

tremendous importance, if the finished floor is to be even and squeak-less. If it's a new home, and conventional sub-flooring has been laid on a diagonal pattern, then it's just a matter of covering the sub-flooring with a smooth layer of building paper.

If it's an older house, there might be trouble if the existing flooring is laid in straight lines. The hardwood must go at right angles, atop the building paper. Or, you can first put down a covering of 1/4 inch plywood—or 5/16 "plycord"—that will make a near-perfect base and allow the hardwood to go in any direction you choose.

The first board, as usual, is the key one. If the walls are not precisely true, run a chalkline down the sub-floor slightly less than two board widths from the "average" wall. Using long lengths of hardwood—they come in bundles of varying lengths—follow the chalkline carefully, nailing both through the tongue and in the bottom of the groove.

Once the basic key board is down, put in place—but do not nail—a course of boards at the back, close to the wall, of the key line. Take a scribe—a school compass will do, if it will hold its adjustment—and set it for exactly one board width.

The scribe is run down against the wall with the point so the pencil end transfers to the hardwood the exact line of the wall, wiggles and all. Then take up the trial course with the pencil marks on it, rip the boards along that line and put them down after the trial lengths have been nailed in place.

ON THE actual nailing, two elements must be watched—steadiness and pressure.

Boards are held in place—groove into tongue—by pressure of the feet or knees (if the knees get tired, as they will, pick up a pair of rubber knee cushions at the garden supply store) and by pounding on a scrap piece of board, so the delicate grooving will not be damaged.

No. 2 oak frequently springs from the bundle—it is so crooked. It may alarm you. But most pieces can be used—you'll be surprised how much of a bend can be cured with proper pressure and by using the snugging-up ability of the nails. Keep a few eight-penny nails handy, if you're using six-pennies on the basic job, and put them in if the bend's real bad.

Steadiness comes in by holding the nail firmly at a 50-degree angle just where the tongue takes off from the main body of the flooring. Keep a foot on the board so it won't chatter. And nail with firm strokes.

Ninety per cent of the nails should go down easily, without the tongue splitting. But when a split does threaten, try a more solid place in the tongue—or use a power drill with a small bit or a push drill to make a pilot hole.

WHEN close to the wall, nails may be driven directly through the surface—rather than through the tongue—because they'll be hidden by the base shoe, or if well "set" the filler will cover them.

When nearing walls, remember that the baseboard and base shoe will cover the last inch and a half. If old floor, and just the shoe has been pulled up, you have three quarters of an inch "grace"—so the fit doesn't have to be too close—except where it will not be covered, like in doorways.

The random lengths are furnished so that the joints can be staggered. A basic rule is that joints should not be "in line" except at least every third or fourth course of boards. Never have the joints come out the same on adjoining courses—strength is lost, so are looks.

Once the flooring is all down, there's the problem of actual filling, sanding, varnishing—or other finishing. Equipment can be rented for the job, and paint stores will advise on the filler and finish.

But T. Tinker's suggestion is to call a professional finisher. He'll charge 10 to 12 cents a square foot—but he'll do the job much better, faster and with less fuss and muss, especially if you and your family are still in the house.

Hardwood Floors

are not HARD to lay

by Tom Tinker

Joe Johnson, carpentry instructor at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, shows how flooring next to a wall may be surface nailed.

THE ONLY thing about laying hardwood floors that is really hard is the wood—if you have plenty of time and patience.

And the reward is one of the highest in the do-it-yourself department—the pride of looking at and walking on a shining new floor.

The preliminary steps are basic. Measure your rooms carefully and then head for the lumber yard.

The lumber merchant will help in the selection of the material involved. Most home-laid flooring is No. 2 grade oak. No. 1 grade looks prettier, unless you like the "random" pattern of the less uniform No. 2, and is easier to handle. But it's more expensive.

In buying the flooring, allow at least 20 to 25 per cent extra beyond the measurements. That's for the finished dimensions and the scrap.

For example, if your rooms measure a total of 450 square feet, buy a total of at least 550 square feet of flooring. As usual, the material is measured before it is finished in the mills—and you have to pay for the sawdust and shavings taken off by the planer and the tongue and groove cutters.

Nails? The lumberman has a guide book for that, as to quantity. On length, get eight penny finishing nails, if laying 3/4 inch flooring; six-penny if the flooring is 1/2 inch.

Preparation of the sub-surface is of the SAFE way to use your power tools

by Tom Tinker

Safety guard should always remain in place, except when making rabbit cuts from the side. And in planing wide stock, make and use push board for safety precaution.

In using jointer-planer, just don't do anything shown here. There is no guard, knot is sure sign of trouble, and so is a short board and a deep cut with the fingers held loosely.

IF THERE'S one homeshop power tool that's more dangerous than any of the others, it's the jointer-planer.

As a tool, it does a beautiful job of smoothing a board.

But as a cutter of fingers, it's just as fast. If the operator—professional or amateur—exercises reasonable care, there's nothing to worry about. But if he's inclined to day-dreaming while working, well, he'd better stick with a hand plane and a piece of sandpaper.

Two of Utah's expert consultants on do-it-yourself work, Day School Supervisor Al Anderson, and Carpentry Instructor Joe Johnson of the Salt Lake Vocational School, have a list of four safety fundamentals for jointer-planer operations:

1. Keep the blade guard in place at all times.
2. Don't try to work short boards. Anything shorter than one foot is dangerous.
3. Watch the grain and go with it. Likewise with knots—a knot is "sure trouble."
4. Avoid deep cuts.

ON DEPTH of cut, it's basic that the harder the wood, the shallower the cut to be made on each pass. It's better to make six shallow cuts than try one deep one, and have your fingers kicked into the path of the razor-sharp blades.

In working end grain, use a pushing block. Or, even safer, make two passes—one in each

G. M. to Build S. L. Training School Center

By JACK E. JARRARD
News Business Editor

General Motors Corp. will build a school on the east bench of Salt Lake City to train about 5,000 mechanics a year, it was announced Tuesday.

The school, known as a General Motors Training Center, will be constructed near the juncture of the old Wasatch Boulevard and Foothill Drive. The Salt Lake City Commission Tuesday morning gave the oke for the center to use Salt Lake City water and sewage facilities.

The center, cost still unannounced, will be on county land on four acres purchased from Sid Mulcock.

5,000 Capacity

When completed, the training center will have capacity to train about 5,000 mechanics a year. The plan was initiated by G. M. for teaching its dealer mechanics the intricacies of the newest developments in cars and trucks.

The center will not be open to public enrollment. It will be primarily an advanced school to train service personnel of G. M. dealers. Also eligible to attend will be dealers' apprentices, mechanics from independent shops who may enroll for specialized courses, and mechanics employed by owners of G. M. vehicle fleets.

Purpose of the center, one of a chain of 35, is to make it possible for dealer mechanics to keep up to date on a systematic basis with new models and technological advances.

Eight Classrooms

The 26,000-square-foot training center will have eight specialized shop classrooms, one for each of the following G. M. divisions: Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac, G M C Truck and Coach, Fisher Body, and United Motors Service.

All training will be highly practical in nature and courses will vary in length depending on the subject. Some courses may take from two to three days and others two to three weeks.

YOUR FUTURE is strictly up to you. As a citizen of a free, dynamic, ever-progressing America, you will find no dictator who will tell you what you must do. Your opportunities will be limited only by your vision of what your future may become, your abilities and how you use them, your character, and your determination.

You will shortly start out on one of the most exciting adventures you will ever have. You will discover that earning a living can be fun.

But, if you want to get the most from life, you will have to organize your thinking.

You will need to use foresight in acquiring those skills which will be most valuable to you later. You will have to plan your life well and follow your plan—yet leave your plan flexible enough to get around obstacles and to take advantage of unforeseen opportunities.

Your future income and position will be determined principally by the values placed upon the services you render to your employers or your customers. Whatever your work, you will have a selling job to do—a task of presenting what you have to offer in the best possible way.

What is a trade training scholarship?

It is an award which recognizes promise in an individual and encourages him to continue preparation for his vocational life. Industry needs trained men.

What does the scholarship cover?

It covers the registration, tuition, and student fees normally charged at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School for one year.

Will the student pay for anything?

Yes. The student must provide for his own tool kit, lodging, books, and personal expenses.

Who is eligible for a scholarship?

Any boy or girl who has achieved an average of "C" or better in high school is eligible. He should be an individual who, in the judgment of his principal, counselor, and advisory teacher is capable by reason of interest, aptitude, and character, of pursuing the program of his choice to a successful completion. The parents of the candidate must be willing for him to enter the program of his choice at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. Any other factors entering into the selection of candidates are left to the discretion of the principal, counselor, and teachers of the school concerned. Recommendations for scholarships are to be submitted to Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

How can you apply for a scholarship?

- Obtain an application form from your school office.
- Fill the form in completely.
- Obtain the signatures of your advisory teacher, counselor, principal, and parent or guardian.
- Obtain a copy of your high school credits from your school office.
- Mail the completed application form and copy of high school credits to:

In cooperation with the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, Associated General Contractors of America, Utah Manufacturers Association, and the Utah State Board for Vocational Education, Salt Lake Area Vocational School is sponsoring an all day orientation conference on Supervisory Training Programs in business and industry on Thursday, May 13, 1954.

The development of effective supervisory personnel is one of the most important problems confronting industry and business today. The orientation conference will assist those working in administrative and supervisory capacities to more effectively teach, and achieve cooperation from their employees. Sample conferences will be presented by the area's outstanding conference leaders. Training is important business--plan to attend this conference. If these, or similar sessions can be used in your organization, Salt Lake Area Vocational School can assist with your problems.

This conference is designed specifically for top management, line executives, staff officers, civic leaders, and others who have supervisory responsibility. It furnishes an opportunity for those individuals to meet for a day and exchange ideas and become acquainted with mutual problems.

You are encouraged to participate in this conference. We hope that you will be able to attend and bring with you those of your key workers that you feel will benefit from such an experience.

Please fill out the enclosed card and return it promptly to the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. This will enable us to properly prepare for all who will be in attendance. The registration fee of $2.50 will include the luncheon and all activities of the day.

41 S. L. Firemen Finish Personnel Training Class

Some 41 officers of the Salt Lake City Fire Department Monday were cited for completion of a voluntary six-week course in handling people, conducted at the Salt Lake Vocational School.

The course, one of a series in supervisory personnel development, was under the direction of Keith M. Macfarlane, course supervisor at the school.

Presenting certificates of graduation at the final meeting of the course Monday was Public Safety Commissioner Lyle B. Nicholes, who praised the officers for their efforts in improving working relationships within their groups.

Members of the Salt Lake

City Civil Service Commission also were in attendance, headed by James M. Armstrong, chairman.

Don E. White, assistant chief, in charge of training for the fire department, pointed out that the course is very important for personnel relationships because the officers must live with their men day in and day out.

"It is absolutely necessary that the officers know how to keep harmony among the men as well as good morale, and for these two reasons alone the course has been a success," he said.

He pointed out also that each officer has the responsibility for training the men in his department. Last year the officers completed a similar course in "The Supervisor as an Instructor."

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Years of development and experience add growth and stature to an organization. As we approach the conclusion of our sixth year of operation it is evident that this trade school is no exception. Our courses now more nearly meet the needs of our industrial community; our faculty is united to accomplish our many objectives; our facilities are constantly improving; the caliber of our student body has been upgraded; the demand for our trainees is greater than we have been able to fill; and the school has won a place of acceptance in the minds of the public.

An amount of $225,000 has been expended during this year to provide training for the area's future tradesmen. Approximately 1800 individuals have participated in day and evening training programs offered by this institution. Many attended to learn trades, others received related instruction to complement their on-the-job apprenticeship training, and still others have received training to supplement skills already acquired.

The 1953-54 school year has been one of tremendous progress! The long range program for remodeling the building took great strides forward when the auto mechanics department was completely renovated and the water tower was removed from the premises. "Salt Lake Area Vocational School trains skilled hands for industry" was the theme of our State Fair display which won a ribbon for excellence. New services were added to our offerings when we were able to employ a full time counselor and commenced offering a Supervisory Training Program, specifically designed to meet the needs of industry. We realized a wish of long standing when our building trades students were able to carry to completion our home building project. Numerous special schools have been conducted in cooperation with training-conscious industries. Enrollment reached almost full capacity early in the year and full enrollment has been sustained to the end of the year.

The years immediately before us will be among the most interesting of all time. Already we are in the midst of an economic readjustment occasioned by war and inflation. Even as this is taking place, however, we must contemplate even greater changes, for the new products of industry and science are changing the world as we have known it. The world of atomic power will no more resemble the world of electricity and steam than our world resembles the period before the industrial revolution.

In a world where rapid change is the order we cannot place our faith in material things. We must look forward and prepare ourselves for the things we know lie ahead. When we have this we may face our future confident that we will be equal to the challenges which lie before us. Faith in ourselves and in our way of life will keep us strong.

Trade School Rites Cite Skill Ments

"The security of the country depends upon the man with a skill," some 74 graduates of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School were told during commencement exercises at the school Wednesday night.

The speaker was Dr. William P. Miller, president of Weber College.

"The man with a skill has security of ability to earn a living," Dr. Miller said. "The country does not owe the man a living but the man owes to the country his personal obligation to become well enough trained to make his own living."

"The Salt Lake Area Vocational School has done an outstanding job of training skilled workers," he added.

A total of 17 separate trades were represented in the graduating class. Lincoln F. Hanks, member of the school's board of control, presented the certificates.

Student speakers at the exercises included N. Wayne Moss, Sandy, student body president, who discussed "Values of Trade Training," and William A. Mares, 132 University St., who spoke on "My Opportunities in This Atomic Age."

Examiners Delay Action on Plea For Deficit Aid

Deseret News 5-13-54
Utah's Board of Examiners Thursday postponed until December any action on requests of the University of Utah and Utah State Agricultural College for $375,505 in deficit appropriations.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee said the requests were to cover the two institutions' employer contributions to the retirement funds. This expense was not considered in fixing the appropriations for the two schools by the 1953 Legislature.

The Public School Employees Retirement Assn., the governor said, has power to defer payment of these sums on an emergency basis until the Legislature can remedy the deficiency.

Other Action

In another action the board deferred employment of an archivist for the Utah Historical Society.

Dr. A. R. Mortensen, executive secretary of the society, sought approval from the examiners to employ an experienced archivist at a salary from $4,000 to $5,000 a year.

He explained that the examiners had granted a deficit appropriation of $7,000 to the society on April 14 to provide for such an archivist and to set up a microfilm program.

Deficit Allowed

Gov. Lee told Dr. Mortensen that the deficit had been allowed before the examiners realized that the state itself could expect a general fund deficit by next July 1. He suggested that the Historical Society return the $7,000 fund to the state.

The examiners also disallowed a claim of $388.40 from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. The sum would reimburse the National Association for Practical Nurse Education of New York for sending two representatives to accredit the Salt Lake School's practical nurse program March 19 to 22.

Examiners Delay Action on Plea For Deficit Aid

Utah's Board of Examiners Thursday postponed until December any action on requests of the University of Utah and Utah State Agricultural College for $375,505 in deficit appropriations.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee said the requests were to cover the two institutions' employer contributions to the retirement funds. This expense was not considered in fixing the appropriations for the two schools by the 1953 Legislature.

The Public School Employees Retirement Assn., the governor said, has power to defer payment of these sums on an emergency basis until the Legislature can remedy the deficiency.

Other Action

In another action the board deferred employment of an archivist for the Utah Historical Society.

Dr. A. R. Mortensen, executive secretary of the society, sought approval from the examiners to employ an experienced archivist at a salary from $4,000 to $5,000 a year.

He explained that the examiners had granted a deficit appropriation of $7,000 to the society on April 14 to provide for such an archivist and to set up a microfilm program.

Deficit Allowed

Gov. Lee told Dr. Mortensen that the deficit had been allowed before the examiners realized that the state itself could expect a general fund deficit by next July 1. He suggested that the Historical Society return the $7,000 fund to the state.

The examiners also disallowed a claim of $388.40 from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. The sum would reimburse the National Association for Practical Nurse Education of New York for sending two representatives to accredit the Salt Lake School's practical nurse program March 19 to 22.

Vocational Home Goes for $6,575 To S. L. Woman

A bid of $6,575 submitted by Nancy Helen Stanford, 74 W. North Temple, Thursday claimed a four-room frame house built by carpentry students of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. The house has been on display on a corner lot at 4th South and 6th East. It will be moved from the lot under terms of the bid.

Polio Victim's Comeback

Carol Refuses to Quit, Builds Bright Future

By RONDA V. WALKER

Left completely helpless three years ago by poliomyelitis, Carol K. Loftis has refused to remain helpless. In fact, she is today the owner and operator of a growing newspaper and magazine business.

Only Carol and her family really know the long hours of determined effort it took day after week after month before she learned, with the aid of strong braces, to sit up in a wheelchair and regain use of her left hand and arm.

And if perseverance and patience are determining factors, Carol will walk again. She has made up her mind to that. Already, with only the aid of her braces and crutches, she has stood alone for a few minutes several times.

With the aid of a new piece of equipment presented to Carol this week, it is hoped that the wasted muscles of her legs might be restored to function so she can walk and run again.

The new equipment, called "the thing" because its builders have not yet found a name for it, is a custom-made exerciser resembling a bicycle. Carol slips her feet into shoes mounted on the pedals, turns on an electric motor, and the machine goes to work to exercise her legs.

"The thing" was designed by Dr. L. B. Harmon, director of vocational rehabilitation for the State Department of Public Instruction. It was built by Richard D. Wellard and William E. LaPearle, welding and machine shop instructors at Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

There is a lot of other special equipment at the Loftis house and in the room where she runs her magazine and newspaper agency.

One of the most helpful items, says Carol, is the electric hoist given to her by Salt Lake Lions Club. Before the hoist came, Carol's family or friends had to lift her in and out of bed, into her wheelchair, into the bathtub. Now the hoist does all this.

Other special items include an electric typewriter which Carol learned to operate with her braced left hand when she visited the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis rehabilitation center at Warm Springs, Ga., a year ago.

To load her typewriter, Carol has a "gadget" which consists of a clothespin-like clip on the end of an 18-inch stick. On the other end of the stick is a mouthpiece, and manipulating it with her tongue and teeth, Carol can pick up papers or envelopes and transfer them to her typewriter.

So she could use the telephone to take magazine and newspaper orders, Dr. Harmon designed and the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph built her a special telephone set, and mounted it on a board which fits over the arms of her wheelchair.

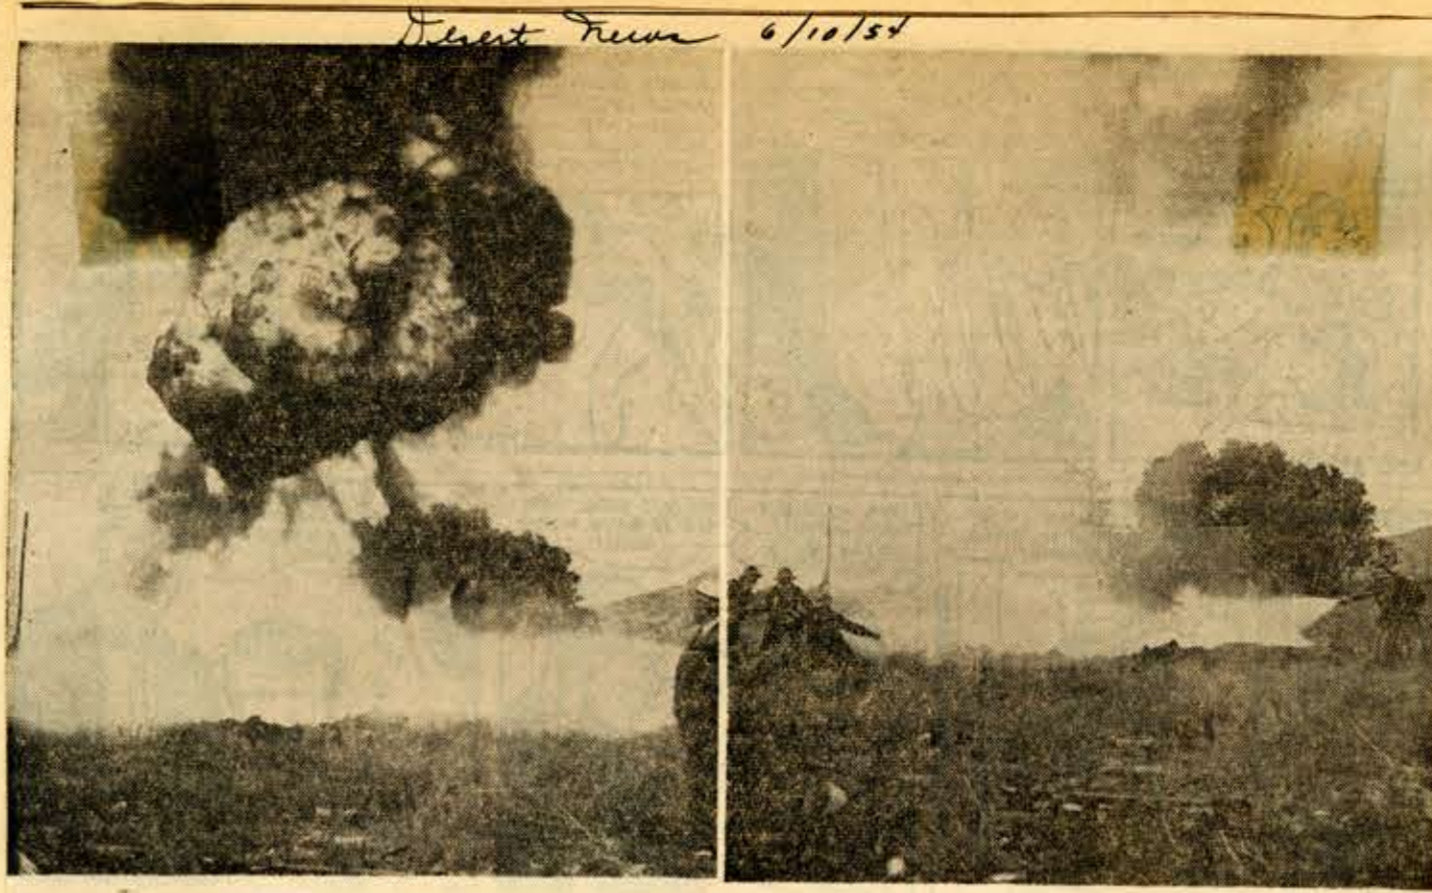

Although it takes hours for Carol to do the same amount of work as a person without handicap could do in minutes, she still finds herself with leisure time occasionally. In those moments, she does oil painting, and has already completed a half dozen pictures.

HOW SHE DOES IT—With a lot of special equipment built by telephone engineers and the help of custom-made arm braces, Carol Loftis, left helpless by poliomyelitis, runs her own magazine agency.

NOW IT'S TOASTY—Comissioner Lyle B. Nicholes, Department of Public Safety, watches a demonstration in fire-fighting techniques by Salt Lake City firemen.

NOW IT'S OUT—The firefighters work fast and before the commissioner can get "warmed up" to the demonstration the billowing blaze is extinguished.

'Live Blazes' Will Train Firemen at S. L. School

Salt Lake City firemen will have plenty of fires to put out June 17-19.

The tenth annual Firemen's Training School gets under way June 17 at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, with demonstrations of fire fighting scheduled with live fires.

The school is sponsored by the Salt Lake City fire department. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, June 17.

A general session will be held in the auditorium of the Vocational School at 9:30 a.m., with group workshops slated in the afternoon.

Firemen attending will be welcomed by Public Safety Commissioner Lyle B. Nicholes, J. K. Piercey, chief of the fire department, and Jay W. Stevens, assistant manager, National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Keynote address will be by Dr. Ivan B. Cutler, assistant professor of the engineering department, University of Utah. His talk is entitled "Atomic Energy and Fire Control—Fighting Fire as Hot as the Sun."

Friday and Saturday sessions will be conducted in "A," "B" and "C" workshop groups, with demonstrations and problems scheduled throughout the day.

Fireman School Will Display Latest in 'Blaze Warfare'

Salt Lake City and Utah firemen are going to school to learn newer techniques in fighting fires.

The "school" will be the 10th annual Firemen's Training Conference June 17, 18 and 19 at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, sponsored by the Salt Lake City Fire Department.

To demonstrate improved fire-fighting techniques the firemen are going to deliberately burn a house at 6th North and 6th West Sts.

D. E. White, assistant fire chief, and program director, said on the opening day registration will be held at 8:30 a.m.

He said approximately 500 firemen and fire equipment representatives and other public officials will attend.

Mr. White will call the session to order. Delegates will be welcomed by City Commissioner Lyle B. Nicholes, in charge of public safety.

Speakers will be Jay W. Stevens, assistant manager, National Board of Fire Underwriters; Fire Chief J. K. Piercey of the Salt Lake City department, and Dr. Ivan B. Cutler, assistant professor of engineering, University of Utah, whose subject will be "Atomic Energy and Fire Control."

MR. WHITE WILL give a resume of the 10 years of the training school.

During the afternoon there will be group meetings on fire department operational techniques, arson, aerial ladders and towers, industrial fire protection, new industrial fire hazards and automatic fire warning.

500 Utah Firemen to Learn A-Blaze Fighting at Meet

Firemen throughout Utah will learn Thursday morning how to fight A-bomb caused fires when they hear Dr. Ivan B. Cutler of the University of Utah Engineering Department discuss "Atomic Energy and Fire Control."

Dr. Cutler will be the principal speaker at the opening session at Salt Lake City Fire Department's 10th annual training school which begins Thursday at 8:30 a.m. and will continue through Saturday in the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

Lyle B. Nicholes, commissioner of public safety for Salt Lake City, will welcome the visiting firemen and Fire Chief J. K. Piercey, Jay W. Stevens, assistant manager, National Board of Fire Underwriters, and Asst. Fire Chief Don E. White, will outline the purposes and trace the history of the training school.

Dr. Cutler's talk will follow. Joining Salt Lake firemen in conducting Thursday's training session is Edward C. Larsen, industrial teacher-trainer at Weber College, Jerry Gosnell of the National Board of Fire Underwriters and Hal Morr, manager, Utah Fire Rating Bureau. Among Salt Lake firemen who will direct discussion groups are Capt. V. L. Kresser, Capt. Allen C. George, Lt. Leon R. de Korver, Lt. John Q. Andrews, Lt. Edmond L. Jensen, Lt. Earl W. Hasselfeld, Lt. Albert E. Gruendell, Lt. Phillip D. Redden, and Lt. Edmond L. Townsend.

Examiners Delay Teacher Raise

Requests for salary increases averaging $200 per year for personnel of the Salt Lake area and Central Utah vocational schools has been held up by the State Board of Examiners.

The board informed the schools that they will be expected to comply with a recent order banning salary increases if they necessitate over-all budget increases.

Presumably, if the schools can find ways of making the salary increases out of other savings, the board would again consider the request.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed bids will be received by the Utah State Building Board for remodeling of the cafeteria and installation of a stairway at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, Salt Lake City, Utah. Bids will be in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by the Salt Lake Area Vocational School and the State Building Board and same may be obtained from the office of the Superintendent of Construction, State Building Board, 419 State Capitol, Salt Lake City. No deposit required.

Prequalification of bidders is required. Prior to any bidder receiving plans and specifications, it will be necessary that he have on file with the Utah State Department of Engineering, completed and approved, the required prequalification statement pertaining to contractor's experience and financial condition.

Bids will be received until the hour of 2:00 p.m. Thursday, July 29, 1954, at which time they will be publicly opened and read aloud in Room 442, State Capitol. A bid bond, cashier's or certified check in the amount of five per cent (5%) of the bid, made payable to the Utah State Building Board, shall accompany bid.

The State Building Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any formality or technicality in any bid in the interest of the State.

Dan Valentine's

Nothing Serious

TEMPUS FUGITS: Time is running out for Korean war veterans. Aug. 20 will be the deadline for GI Bill privileges for Salt Lake Korean veterans.

Dan Valentine

And Jay L. Nelson, president of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, is worried about it.

He's so worried, in fact, that special arrangements made to move have been up the fall school semester from Sept. 8 to Aug. 16.

This will give veterans of the Korean war a chance to enroll at the vocational school for special courses, courses ranging from barbering, beauty culture to mechanics and commercial art.

If the Korean veterans let the Aug. 20 date slip by, they lose their chance for free education advantages under the GI Bill of Rights.

Mr. Nelson is making a special effort these days to streamline his courses for the Korean veteran. He feels the young veterans can best profit by vocational, on the job education.

"I'm willing to offer any course that will be of value and use to a veteran," he says.

So, I've got some suggestions for some new courses.

Already, the Salt Lake Vocational school offers classes in welding and radio, electronics and drafting, carpentry and automotive mechanics.

But these are standard, run of the mill, courses.

What the school needs are some practical courses which will help the veteran along the pathway of life.

For instance: How about a short course in how to talk a cop out of a parking ticket. This could be an hour-long, once-a-week class, and an accomplished liar and excuse-maker (an unemployed politician) could instruct the students in how to fix parking tickets, how to complain to policemen, how to tear up parking tickets found on windshields.

Or, how about a course in whistling at girls?

Such a class would be of immense value to the young soldier home from the war. The new generation has never acquired the technique of girlwhistling that was reached by the depression generation. In the old days—and I proudly number myself among the old grads—a fellow could stand in front of a pool hall, and whistle at three or four girls, all with one pucker. The new youngsters now on the street can hardly raise a whistle loud enough to turn the head of a young red-headed divorcee on Saturday night.

Panel Advances Security Aid For 600 Utahns

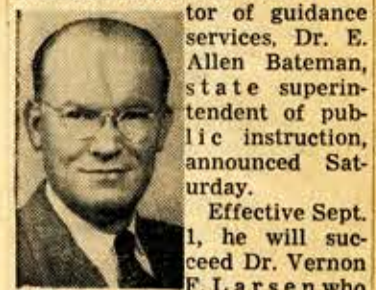

Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 20 — Senate Finance Committee approved Tuesday an amendment sponsored by Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R., Utah) extending old-age and survivors insurance coverage to about 600 Utahns.

He said his amendment would extend this coverage to employees of Weber, Carbon and Dixie Junior Colleges, Central Utah Vocational School, Salt Lake Area Vocational School, Center for Adult Blind, the Union High School at Roosevelt, Utah High School Activities Assn., the State Industrial School, State Training School, State Board of Education and the Utah School Employees Retirement Board.

State Appoints Guidance Aid

Dr. Cecil O. Samuelson, University of Utah faculty member, has been appointed state director of guidance services.

Dr. Samuelson resigned recently to take a California position in private industry.

A graduate of University of Utah, where he also received his master's and doctor's degrees and a certificate in social work, Dr. Samuelson was assistant professor of educational psychology during the past year.

He also has been a counselor at Granite High School and the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, and from 1942 to 1948 was assistant director of vocational rehabilitation in the state school office.

Vocational School Sets Early Term

The Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East St., will open its doors for an early semester to accommodate veterans who are required to begin school work prior to Aug. 20.

The trade school will begin classes Aug. 16, and qualified veterans may register from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily from Aug. 9 to 13, officials said.

Vocational School To Open Aug. 16

Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, will open its doors for trade classes Aug. 16 for those veterans who are required to begin school work prior to Aug. 20, it was announced Wednesday.

Qualified veterans may register at the school from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily from Aug. 9 to Aug. 13, inclusive. Registrars will assist veterans in preparing forms of application to the Veterans Administration for certificates of training and education.

115 Veterans Sign For Education Under G. I. Bill

Some 115 veterans of the Korean conflict had applied for admission to schools in the Salt Lake area under the G. I. bill before the deadline Friday.

University of Utah reported that 45 applications had been received. Approximately 40 were received by Salt Lake Area Vocational School, about 25 by Henager's School of Business and five by LDS Business College.

The deadline is effective for veterans discharged Aug. 20, 1952.

Utah Firemen Attending S. L. School

Some 250 firemen from all parts of Utah gathered Thursday morning at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, to learn "new wrinkles" in fire fighting and what to expect if an atomic or hydrogen bomb should be exploded in their area.

It was part of Salt Lake City Fire Department's annual training school, to continue through Saturday. The school was originated by Fire Chief J. K. Piercey in 1945 and has grown in popularity ever since.

DR. IVAN B. CUTLER, assistant professor of engineering, University of Utah, left no doubt in the minds of the firemen of what to expect if a nuclear bomb should explode in any Utah community.

"An H-bomb, similar to the one exploded in 1952, could wipe out Salt Lake City and would destroy most of the valley," he declared. "Sporadic fires would keep firemen busy for a long time," he added.

Jerry Goswell of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, spoke on "Arson."

He told the firemen arson was the most difficult of all crimes to prove because most of the evidence is burned. He said intentionally lighted fires cost the United States more than $100 million annually.

"It isn't an accident that some industrial plants are free from fire hazards," Capt. Allen C. George declared. He said management should take the lead in eliminating its own fire hazards and should train employees how to operate available

EDWARD C. LARSEN, industrial teacher-trainer at Weber College, Ogden, launched a three-day training course for firemen instructors.

Six other officers in the Salt Lake Fire Department showed films, gave demonstrations and led discussions in operational techniques. Concluding feature of the opening day was a demonstration of aerial ladders and water towers, presented by Lt. Edmond L. Jensen with the use of "Big Dan," the department's 100-foot aerial ladder truck.

Friday's session will begin at 9 a.m. at the Vocational School and will climax with the burning of a house at 6th North and 6th West in the afternoon.

Training School For Firemen Launched in S. L.

Salt Lake City Fire Department's 10th annual training school opened Thursday morning, with training planned in everything from A-bomb fires to brush flareups.

The school, being held at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, is being attended by more than 500 interested persons from all over Utah and parts of neighboring states.

"Atomic Energy and Fire Control" was subject of an address by Dr. Ivan B. Cutler of the University of Utah Engineering Department, in opening sessions.

Later in the day, trainees were to witness the actual burning of a house at 6th North and 6th West.

Conducting Thursday's training sessions—the first of the three-day school—were Edward C. Larsen, industrial teacher-trainer at Weber College; Jerry Gosnell of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and Hal Morr, manager, Utah Fire Rating Bureau.

Bringing Our Social Insurance Up to Date

Social Security was born in the depression years and was a natural development of the urbanization of society.

The original Social Security Act of 1935 had as its ultimate goal the provision of retirement income for all the nation's aged, but only 25 million workers were brought under the system at the time. This was recognized as a mere start and it was frankly a stab in the dark with the program based on considerable guesswork.

Even so, the outcry against the "socialistic" phase of the compulsory national social insurance program, has subsided. The Social Security expansion bill signed by President Eisenhower this week was one of the least partisan, least controversial measures passed by Congress.

The measure brings 10,200,000 additional persons under the Old Age and Survivor Insurance plan. These include 3,600,000 farmers, 3,500,000 additional state and local government workers (on a voluntary basis), 2,100,000 more farm workers, 200,000 additional household employees, 250,000 ministers (voluntary) and 100,000 engineers, architects and accountants. Still excluded are 300,000 lawyers and doctors, 1,500,000 federal employees, 3,300,000 in the armed forces and some 5,900,000 persons whose income is too low to qualify. Many of the 11 million excluded are protected by other retirement systems, however.

The new law also increases benefits. The average increase is $6 a month. Primary benefits (for a single retired worker) will range from $30 to $98.50 compared with the present $25 to $85. For workers retiring in the future, the maximum will rise to $108.50. Family benefits, which are based on primary payments, will rise from the present maximum of $168.75 to $200.

The nearly universal plan of social insurance permits a retired person to earn $1,200 a year, with no restrictions in any one month, without losing Social Security benefits. Previously he lost at least one retirement check if he earned more than $75 in a month.

For persons covered for a considerable time before becoming disabled, inability to work will not reduce the old age pension collectible at 65. Also the gaps in Social Security coverage through unemployment will not reduce the retirement pension.

Enterprise and encouragement to work and save are not eliminated, as many have feared. The size of the retirement pension depends largely on earnings. For example, the man who works steadily at $4,200 or more a year until mid-1956—or whatever later date he reaches 65—will be able to retire and draw the top pension at $108.50 a month. If the man has a wife the two will receive a total of $162.50 a month, after both are 65.

Increased benefits are provided in case of the death of the family breadwinner before reaching retirement age. Individuals already retired will receive larger pensions also.

While more "security" is provided for the 58 million workers who are or will be covered by the Social Security system, taxes also go up to help finance the gigantic plan. The present tax of 2 per cent on wages, paid by both employer and employee, will increase gradually for both, starting in 1960, to 4 per cent by 1975, unless Congress should change the schedule in the meantime.

There likely will be complaints when the new tax bite is applied. And workers who pay in for 40 years before drawing benefits may object to others receiving pensions after contributing for only 18 months to a few years. Even so, if the government is able to carry out its obligations under the Social Security plan—and we are confident it will—everyone covered will receive a splendid insurance bargain.

The addition of new revenue expanding the Social Security fund will raise new problems about the maintenance and use of the fund. Meantime, the program will be under the scrutiny of economists and actuarial experts. We think Congress was wise to adopt the administration program, rejecting the pay-as-you-go proposal and efforts to give pensions to 5 million additional persons not eligible for them.

The insurance principle of the Social Security program has been preserved and we believe the system is being modified to meet the demands of the times and in accordance with the original plan of assuring a comfortable life to most American people in their sunset years.

Staff Named For S.L. Area School

Administrative and instructional personnel for Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, were announced Thursday by the Salt Lake area board of control for vocational education.

Day school instruction will begin Wednesday, and evening school training on Sept. 13, said Jay L. Nelson, school president.

APPOINTED For the 1954-55 year are Mr. Nelson, president; A. E. Anderson, day school supervisor; Lloyd V. Tilt, evening school supervisor; Stephen J. Beeley, training coordinator and consultant; Leo R. Bishop and Lou Howcroft, custodians; Jane Morrison, cafeteria; Betty Owen, secretary; David T. Pearson, counselor; Florence Piacitelli, day registrar; Burton T. Talmadge, bookstore manager; William A. Thriot, evening registrar; Amy F. Tomita, secretary.

Howard, Dorothy Hansen, Ellen Anderson, Venita Capson and Leda Jensen, practical nursing; Ray Harris, Courtney Darlington and Kenneth Olsen, sheet metal; Bernice Patterson, tailoring and fashion design; August Gref, upholstery; Richard D. Wellard, George S. Bringham and Ed Kone, welding.

Teaching and 'The Art of Encouragement'

There is something in the air these days that has nothing to do directly with the state of the world, the cool nights or the yellowing of the landscape. An urgency prevails in uncounted households that is unrelated with the European Defense crisis or the political campaign.

The majority of the country's 28 million school children will troop back to the classrooms this week, next week or the one following, and the vast amount of preparations under way affect almost everyone in some way. There are many visits to stores to buy clothing and supplies and a speeding up of the home sewing activities.

The greatest activity is taking place, however, among those who operate America's great enterprise. School buildings are being put into final shape, supplies are being distributed and, more important, teachers and supervisors are holding orientation meetings and institutes—getting ready for the big job ahead. Many of those participating are embarking on new careers.

In Salt Lake City, for instance, about 141 instructors new to the school system and 20 re-entering the profession will attend a series of briefing sessions this week preparatory to the opening of school the day after Labor Day, Sept. 7. Similar meetings are scheduled in Salt Lake County; in fact in at least 28 of Utah's 40 school districts.

We do not presume to know how new teachers should be oriented but we hope that both new and experienced instructors are given a reminder along the lines of the remarks of Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs of the Chicago Community Child Guidance Center, made recently before a teachers conference in that city.

Some teachers need to go back to school and learn how to handle children, the reputable psychiatrist told his audience. Many educational practices constitute a series of discouraging experiences for the child, he continued, and no teacher training program should be considered complete without at least one full semester in "the art of encouragement."

A child needs encouragement as a plant needs water, the doctor said. "No corrective procedure in school can be successful unless it provides encouragement and self-confidence."

That seems sound advice, though we are not sure teachers can learn it by going back to school. Human warmth and the ability to inspire and help are perhaps more a product of the personality than professional training. And their worth is incalculable. Unfortunate indeed is the adult who does not remember teachers who instilled confidence, who drew him out and nudged him along the paths his talents led. Such teachers are jewels. Many persons also remember the opposite type of teacher, the cold, I've-got-a-job-to-do, man or woman of little perception. They aren't really teachers but day laborers putting in their time and going through meaningless motions.

The quality of a teacher's own life spells the difference between good and poor schooling, though good teaching defies easy definition. It isn't always related to college degrees or certification but is bound up with love of fellow humans, patience and tolerance. A teacher's impact on young people is as great in terms of what he is as in terms of what is taught.

Teachers themselves also are often products of their environment and they need confidence and encouragement. We need to keep in mind that a teacher is a person in his own right—worthy of respect and dignity in proportion to the degree that he develops and flowers.

Members of the school community have a very real obligation to aid the teacher in achieving meaning for his own life so that he can impart that meaning and practice the "art of encouragement" on the precious charges we turn over to him for instruction and guidance.

Vocational School Rings Bell Wednesday for Fall Term

School bells will ring Wednesday for the 566 students registered last spring for trade training classes this fall at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, Jay L. Nelson, president, announced Thursday that day classes will start on that day, and evening classes on Sept. 13.

Of this number, 272 are day school registrants, signed up for 16 different trade classes, and 294 are night school registrants for the 33 different trade courses offered.

Registrations at the school will be conducted until Sept. 10, each weekday from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

TRIBUNE 7-3-54

College Issue Should Be Studied Further

The Salt Lake Tribune advised against any snap decision early last December when a proposal was suddenly made to a special session of the Legislature calling for abandoning the state system of junior colleges.

A study of higher education, including the state's junior colleges, was getting under way by the Legislative Council and we urged that no action be taken until the survey was completed.

The Legislature hastily passed the bills, one in effect transferring Weber, Dixie and Snow colleges back to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints which owned and operated them prior to 1933, and one to close Carbon College. The action was taken under suspension of the rules, without formal committee hearings and without the information from the Legislative Council study.

Public reaction, notably in Weber County, was immediate and strong and petitions were circulated for initiative action to rescind the hasty action of the Legislature. During this time The Tribune again called for reconsideration by the Legislature of the merits of each college, after the special study of the Legislative Council was completed. A sufficient number of signatures were collected and the matter is now on the ballot for decision of the people at the November 2 election.

If the voters uphold the Legislature, the three colleges will revert to church administration and Carbon will be closed. If the referendum goes against the legislative action, the status quo will be maintained. In a regular session, with the overall higher education picture before it, the Legislature could then weigh the case of each college separately, hold public hearings and act without haste or pressure.

We are still convinced the Legislature acted too hastily, without adequate opportunity for full consideration of the problem either by the lawmakers or by the general public. We think it was wrong to lump the colleges together, without weighing the human and spiritual elements involved in each, and transfer them like so many acres of real estate. Under the original deed in which the state took over the colleges in 1933 the three formerly owned by the church revert back to its administration if relinquished by the state. That is altogether proper and we do not question the character of church education. The church has said it did not seek return of the institutions but, if returned by the state, would operate them "in the interest of the communities involved."

Possibly the transfer of Dixie and Snow could have been made with approval of most of the residents of St. George and Ephraim, locations of the two schools. The physical plants of the schools have not changed greatly since the original transfer. But even this should be thoroughly explored before action is taken.

Weber College's situation is different.

A considerable part of the population at Ogden is not of the predominant faith and interests are diversified. Moreover, the physical college has grown from two small buildings to several times that number located on an entirely new campus, a campus acquired with funds raised in the community. A million dollars in state funds have been invested in new buildings. In addition to being an academic school, Weber, with 2,589 students and trainees of all kinds, is the largest vocational school in the state.

Carbon College also presents a special problem. Though small it serves a wide geographic area somewhat isolated from the Wasatch front communities. It should not be closed down without a full study of the consequences.

The issues are not religious or political. The real point in question is the future of higher education in Utah. The vocational schools at Provo and Salt Lake City are also a part of the overall picture and should be included in the study.

Pending the rendering of a comprehensive report on higher education, with special emphasis on the possible and probable growth of the various sections of the state and shifting of population, we think the junior college issue should go back to the Legislature for a more thorough, conscientious study. We therefore urge voting "AGAINST" on both the junior college questions.

Because her husband, Earl Miller of Provo, had a jammed gun, Mrs. Miller took advantage of situation and bagged huge buck.

It Says Here, Men, th' Gals Can Get Buckskins, Too

The once rough and tough deer hunting sport, which was almost exclusively a man's outing, is rapidly being invaded by the fairer sex and in several cases the women are showing up the menfolk.

For instance, take Mrs. Ivan Robb of Paragonah, Iron County. Her husband was ill the other morning so she picked up her rifle and walked about a mile into the foothills east of Parowan. It was not reported whether she fixed her husband his breakfast before she left but by 7 a.m. she had dropped a 210-pound buckskin.

OLD TIMERS around Paragonah, who incidently have seen some mighty fine deer specimens, described the antlers, which had five points on one side and four on the other, as the most unusual set seen on a deer in those parts.

Then down Manti way, Mrs. Earl Miller, formerly of Manti but now from Provo, brought down a 250-pound four-point buck while her husband stood helplessly by trying to unjam his rifle.

MODESTY SEEMS to run with the women hunters for Mrs. Miller says she shot the deer in "self defense." She dropped the big boy with the last shell after missing him with the first shots as he came straight at her in high brush with just his head visible.

This was the first buck killed by Mrs. Miller in five years of hunting, but she indicated that things will be better at home from now on, especially since she toppled the buckskin while her husband stood helplessly.

Gov. Lee to Urge Local Rule for Training Schools

Gov. J. Bracken Lee will recommend to the 1955 Legislature that the two state operated vocational schools be turned over to local school districts.

The two vocational schools are the Salt Lake Area Vocational School operated on the former Troy Laundry property, 431 S. 6th East St., and the Central Utah Vocational School at Provo.

The governor in his announcement Monday said he did not think it was fair for the state to operate vocational schools in the two centers while local school districts had to provide vocational training in other areas of the state.

He pointed out that both Carbon College at Price and Weber College, Ogden, now offer extensive vocational training.

Under the plan proposed by Gov. Lee, the locally operated vocational schools would obtain state uniform school fund money to assist in the cost of operations.

Gov. Lee stated his intentions to recommend discontinuation of state operations of the two schools at a meeting of the Board of Examiners.

School Funds Predicted Key to Lee's Message

May Inform Legislators Of Junior College Plan

By O. N. Malmquist
Tribune Political Editor

Gov. J. Bracken Lee is expected to devote much of his opening message to the 1955 Utah Legislature to school financing.

The message, if the usual practice is followed, will be delivered to a joint session Tuesday—the second day of the 60-day session.

The governor reportedly will propose a local-state aid plan for financing junior colleges and the two state-supported vocational schools.

The plan contemplates creation of junior college districts which would carry part of the financial load of operating the schools.

The degree of local support could be great or small, depending upon the amount of the state aid.

Another Way

The financing of one and possibly two of the colleges, however, may be solved so far as the state government is concerned in another manner.

Reports were current Friday in the Capitol that a bill will be introduced to return Dixie College to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. There was some talk that if such a bill does appear it may prompt a similar move with respect to Snow College, which is now a branch of the Utah State Agricultural College.

Local Instigation

Any move to revive the college transfer issue, it was reported, will have to be originated locally and will not carry state administration sponsorship.

In the last election the electorate, by referendum vote, repealed legislative acts to withdraw state support from four junior colleges and transfer three of them back to the Church. But that vote was on a package proposition involving three colleges.

Funds Problem

Another phase of school financing which the governor is expected to deal with is the constitutional question of supervisory authority of the governor, Board of Examiners and the Finance Commission over the disbursement of funds appropriated for public school purposes. A recent district court decision held that the State Board of Education is not subject to control of these executive officers and agencies.

The problem of financing the state-guaranteed minimum program for the public schools will tie into the whole subject of tax revenues and appropriations.

Building Program

Still another school subject which is expected to receive gubernatorial attention, either in his opening message or in a separate message, is the emergency school building program, which has been financed out of sales tax money.

The Temporary School Survey Commission, which determined district needs, has recommended discontinuance of the program and this recommendation was adopted by the Legislative Council.

Tax Competitors

A reported gubernatorial proposal for a state building program would affect school financing, inasmuch as the schools and building are competitors for sales tax surpluses. The governor is expected to recommend that the building program, which has been at a standstill for the past year because of a lack of funds, be given the first priority.

The governor's message will be televised and broadcast.

S.L. School Board Elects, Notes Treasurer Need

Salt Lake City's Board of Education Tuesday night elected officers and announced that it will be in the market for a new clerk-treasurer sometime this year.

LeGrand P. Backman, Salt Lake attorney, was re-elected president of the board for his fourth two-year term. He was re-elected to the board for a four-year term during the November general election.

Named vice president by the board was Virgil A. Smith, Salt Lake insurance company executive, who succeeds Juvenile Court Judge Rulon W. Clark.

Suitable Replacement

The board decided to continue employment of R. Y. Gray, clerk-treasurer, "until a suitable replacement can be found." It was pointed out that Mr. Gray, who has served in this capacity since 1941, will reach the compulsory retirement age of 70 during the current year.

Base salary for the position is $6,250 a year. Mr. Gray's current salary is $8,340 a year, which is attained in nine increases in grade.

In addition, the board named two of its new members, chosen in November, to positions on the board of the Salt Lake Area Vocation School. They are Wallace F. Toronto, whose SLAVS post will expire Dec. 31, 1957, and Waldo M. Anderson, whose term will conclude Dec. 31, 1956.

Mr. Backman announced appointment of four persons to a five-member committee which will study the advisability of increasing the school year to 10 months duration from its current nine-month session. The appointments were made on

Contract Reductions

In other action Tuesday night, the board approved $15,667 in reductions on the contract for remodeling and construction of an addition at Ensign School. This brings the cost of the general construction contract down to approximately $282,000. W. J. Dean Sons is contractor.

A proposal introduced at the December meeting to limit board meetings to approximately three hours, was tabled without debate Tuesday night upon motion of Glenn V. Culp. Board meetings, which begin at 7:30 p.m., adjourn at anywhere from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m. currently.

We stand for the Constitution of the United States, with its three departments of government, each fully independent in its own field.

What Governor Lee Asks

Governor Lee's message to the Utah State Legislature outlines reasonably well the biggest part of the task the legislators face during the next two months.

More than half of the message is concerned with taxation and other fiscal matters, and this is justified. Certainly the Legislature's biggest single job is to figure how to cut the pattern of state operation to fit the cloth of state income. The comfortable cushion of 13 million dollars taken from the emergency relief fund for state operations two years ago—which made property and income tax cuts possible—will be absent this time. Either state taxes will have to be raised or services cut. Or perhaps a bit of both.

What should be done, then, about taxes? The governor says he will oppose any tax increase other than to remove existing inequities. He holds out some hope for increased earnings from regular income and corporation franchise taxes. No doubt there will be some increase of revenue from state lands and from bringing oil, gas and uranium under more comprehensive taxation. But beyond what these tax sources can cover, nearly 10 million dollars more must be raised for the uniform school fund alone. As Governor Lee is forced to admit, "an automatic property tax increase for school purposes seems unavoidable at this time."

The governor makes a number of suggestions to cut costs and keep that tax increase at a minimum. These are:

(1) Cut out state aid for the School Lunch Program. The only comprehensive study of this program was made by the 60-man School Survey Commission which concluded in 1953 that "surely free children of pioneer ancestry need not be fed by the federal and state government." There is no reason why districts that desire it cannot continue to operate the school lunch program on their own. All the benefits of the program can continue, with the full costs paid by participants in the program—and at a half-million dollar saving to the state.

(2) Eliminate the Emergency School Building Fund program. The governor's argument for throwing this program out centers completely on reports of some abuses. He made no effort to show that the need for the program no longer exists. Nor did he take any note of the recommendation of the Temporary School Building Survey Commission that while the program should be abolished it should be replaced by a long-range equalization program.

(3) Put the state vocational schools and junior colleges on a financial basis partly supported by the state and partly by local districts or regions. There are reasonable arguments for this—and against it. Establishing a fair formula for support of these institutions on a joint state-district basis would be exceedingly difficult. It is a problem that has had no adequate study. Now is a good time to authorize such a study. There must be no rushing into an ill-considered course of action before all the facts are in.

Three items in the governor's message relating to his running battle with educators deserve attention. They are (1) clarification of the anti-nepotism law on a reasonable basis, (2) amplification of a Constitutional provision to make it clear that ALL persons paid from public funds shall be prohibited from serving in the Legislature, and (3) expansion of Utah's "little Hatch Act" to prohibit teachers, as other public employees, from participating in politics.

Otherwise, he called for a law opening all government meetings to the public, for a stronger grand jury system, and for a realistic reapportionment plan—all of which the public can wholeheartedly support. It can support, too, his call for continued strong action for the Upper Colorado River Storage Project and for continued work on our highways without boosting the gasoline tax. One can well wonder, however, why when the governor asked for study of construction of a state office building, and a National Guard Armory, he didn't include facilities to house Utah's criminally insane.

The message has its shortcomings, of course. The governor reaches some conclusions the people of Utah will hardly be willing to accept. Moreover, he places considerable emphasis in his message on certain national and world problems while neglecting completely such matters as highway safety and others vitally important to Utah.

But out of what the governor says comes, in summary, a feeling that Utah state government is going ahead on an even keel, that we have no real emergencies at hand and that we can expect a moderate, constructive legislative session.

Gov. Lee's 'Message' Misrepresents Utahns

Governor Lee's message before the Utah Legislature, was largely the usual, expected attack on Utah education and certain highly-respected and qualified educators, and a distinct attempt to weaken and destroy, particularly our state vocational education, our state junior college system and other essential services and functions in our state.

Such chronic, spiteful and personal attacks are not only a distinct misuse of the governor's prestige (which gives him unlimited publicity on anything he chooses to say) but the same is undignified and unbecoming the great executive office of our state. The governor's message and attitude shows more clearly than ever the typical Lee-economy, which, long since, has been shown to be fictitious and counterfeit through and through.

Are we to understand from the governor's remarks and well-known stand on foreign aid, the Bricker Amendment, and the United Nations, etc., and who presumes to speak and make recommendations on these subjects for Utah people, that he is, himself, an outright isolationist? And is he thus using his high office to speak freely for a few well known other isolationist leaders in our state standing back of him?

If our governor sought to express in his message the sincere wishes of Utah people, he would join and co-operate with our national government and all other states in the Union in the greatest current project on earth—that of promoting world peace and mutual understanding among all nations of the globe, through the United Nations, and doing our full part to put peaceably down aggression and war in this enlightened age.

The known achievements of the Point 4 Program, foreign aid and other programs of the United Nations are too numerous to mention, especially the uplift it has directly given backward and underprivileged nations in the fields of agriculture, health, irrigation, welfare, soil reclamation and education, and rehabilitating millions of homeless and destitute children. Many of these backward nations have literally been lifted up from disease, poverty and ignorance (wherein Communism takes root and thrives) to a new and wholesome outlook on life — to better help themselves and become more and more self-supporting and co-operative in establishing the ideals of genuine liberty and freedom in their own countries.

The United Nations is the only organized hope for world peace today, and Governor Lee would even destroy this, and yet he offers no substitute.

This stand of Governor Lee discredits and misrepresents Utah people before the rest of the world, and Utah legislators should not be misled or trapped into supporting and furthering such untenable, misleading recommendations.

Former State Senator.

Taxing and Spending Will Be the Big Issue

There was little that was surprising or unexpected in Governor Lee's message to the 31st Utah Legislature Tuesday. The proposals he made, and his analysis of the problems the session faces, were pretty much as anticipated.

Several of Governor Lee's initial comments bear repetition. He emphasized that the general condition of state government is good. He recognized that, as a state grows, its services must grow—and he declared "there is nothing wrong with this as long as we keep a happy medium between taxing and spending, and do not permit a growth greater than we can support." He envisioned increased costs of education, as increased population adds to enrollment, and also increased costs in such fields as welfare and highway traffic control.

The big issue the Legislature therefore faces is finances. The governor said the two alternatives were obvious — cutting marginal services or increasing taxes. He implied the Legislature might do a little of both, although he came out in general opposition to new taxes except if they removed inequities or offset other taxes which might be excessive.

Maneuvering a way through this tax-revenue-spending labyrinth will be the Legislature's main occupation the next 60 days. The governor did not spell out his proposals, but he seemed to feel a property tax boost will be unavoidable, that there should be a rewriting of the state income tax, equity in taxation of oil, gas and uranium, continued effort by the State Tax Commission to plug loopholes in erratic assessment of real and personal property, and that there can be increased sales tax revenue through intensified auditing of accounts.

Except for these, the governor apparently would cut the state's spending suit to fit its revenue cloth.

The governor made a number of specific recommendations. The Tribune applauds. One is that the Legislature this session deal with reapportionment by a "suitable compromise" which "could be adopted with a little give and take." This, he correctly said, is due the people. Other good proposals concern the mandatory summoning of grand juries, the continuation of the state's building program with the Legislature establishing a priority schedule, and a call for united, intensified effort to secure authorization of the Upper Colorado River Storage Project.

The Tribune believes a suggestion by the governor for a joint state and regional or district plan for financing junior colleges is worthy of the Legislature's careful consideration. And we approve his praise for the Legislative Council, which has through the years very decidedly proved its value to the state in studying or supervising the study of troublesome issues.

In his message the governor called attention of the Legislature to the spending control problems created by a recent adverse court decision relative to executive authority to supervise appropriations made for school purposes. This decision is now before the Utah Supreme Court on appeal. Certainly there is need for clarification on this matter, first by the Supreme Court, and then if necessary by such action by the Legislature or by vote of the people as may be appropriate.

A number of controversial proposals relative to education should have critical legislative examination—the proposed withdrawal of state aid for the school lunch program, the proposed modification of teacher certification standards, the change to primary local responsibility for financing vocational schools, and the termination of emergency school building aid.

On the whole, however, The Tribune thinks the governor's message was temperate and constructive. And we echo his closing plea to the Legislature that all "join together so as to continue to provide the people of Utah with a sound, efficient and honest administration of their affairs."

We stand for the Constitution of the United States, with its three departments of government, each fully independent in its own field.

Utah's Budget Prospects

Governor Lee's budget message to the Legislature yesterday represents a big improvement over previous years in the matter of realistic agreement between the governor and the various departments regarding expenditures.

Not that all will be sweetness and light—far from it. But for the most part, the vast extremes between requests and recommendations this year have been avoided. The job of the Legislature in making appropriations will be easier because of it.

The great need for further improvement lies in the field of education. One still gets the impression that persons responsible for education budgets are pegging them unrealistically high, knowing that they will be cut anyway, and that the governor is setting them unrealistically low, knowing they will be raised. The haggling that results is not good government.

In general, the budget message represents an earnest effort to keep the state's spending within bounds. For the most part, it deserves the support of the citizens of the state and their representatives in the Legislature. The consolidations he suggests in several government offices and services, his insistence on an increased program of tax evaluation and auditing, and the new method of compiling the budget itself deserve special commendation.

There are some sections of the message which the public cannot accept, however.

One is his failure to recommend any money at all for operating the state's two vocational schools at Salt Lake City and Provo. The state might well study carefully a method of putting these schools on a local district basis, though it has by no means been proven that they should be. In any event, changing their status would be an extremely complicated matter. It can't be done overnight. Cutting the schools off at the pockets before a thorough study has been made and a conversion plan adopted is certainly not the way to do it—if it is to be done at all.

Governor Lee took a much more realistic attitude toward the junior colleges, which he would also like to see on a district basis. He requested fair appropriations for each of them, presumably while intending to continue to push for a study of the changeover. The vocational schools should have been handled the same way, and the Legislature should see that they are.

Most people will agree with the governor's contention that there is too much earmarking of funds in Utah, taking away some of the Legislature's right of deciding appropriations. The earmarking of sales tax receipts for welfare aid, for example, cannot be justified under any pretext. Had the governor urged that the practice be reduced to a minimum, one could hardly have taken issue with him.

But he urged it be abolished altogether. This would depart from the reasonable and correct principle of having special groups pay for services they alone use—paying fish and game management costs from hunting and fishing license receipts, for example, or paying costs of treating alcoholics by increasing liquor license fees.

In this connection, it is regrettable that Governor Lee failed to recommend the alcoholic treatment center Utah so badly needs, or counseling and other services to cut down the state's divorce rate, or driver training in high schools to cut the terrible highway tolls. He has implied, in fact, that he will veto any bills including them or any other new services unless the sponsors present "some means to finance them . . . without resorting to earmarking of funds."

There is a difference between long-range and short-sight economy. These social welfare measures would, if passed, more than pay for themselves by dollar and cent savings in state welfare costs, to say nothing of the inestimable savings in human dignity and happiness. The Legislature should write them into the otherwise generally—excellent budget blueprint the governor presented.

Challenging Task of Dividing the Money

Governor Lee's proposed budget for the 1955-57 biennium seems on the whole most realistic and defensible. While there will undoubtedly be opposition to some particular recommendations, there should not be the legislative-gubernatorial haggling which in the past has often made sound fiscal planning difficult.

The budget of $69,250,000 compares with total appropriations and deficits for the current biennium totaling $79,850,000. The indication of a sharp drop in state spending, however, is misleading. The new budget does not include money for the uniform school fund and for emergency school building. Funds for the latter Mr. Lee proposes to eliminate all together. And he anticipates that a statewide property tax will, as required by law, make up the shortage in the uniform school fund.

Actually the governor's budget represents the largest spending program in state history and provides increases in spending for most departments and institutions over the previous biennium. In this respect the governor has realistically accepted the fact that, as Utah grows, the cost of various state-supported services, from policing the highways to operating the deaf and blind school, is bound to increase.

In this connection we think the governor's budget is particularly commendable in its proposals for substantial increased appropriations for the state prison, for adult probation, for health services, for driver licensing, for the highway patrol, for the industrial school, the state training school and the state hospital.

A nearly half million dollar increase in the appropriation for the Utah Tax Commission, to make possible better enforcement of sales and income tax laws, and to carry on the statewide property assessment re-evaluation program, is excellent. This project should help plug tax loopholes, catch tax evaders, and insure equitable taxation of all groups in the state. Such action is a prerequisite to any general overhaul of the Utah tax structure. Without it we cannot know how fairly the tax burden is now spread, nor even how productive of revenue it can be if the taxes we now have are fully and fairly collected.

We applaud the specific appropriation for promotion of the Upper Colorado River development, the general recommendation against earmarking of funds, and the proposal that funds be made available to continue the state's building program.

There are some points in the budget which call for careful examination. One of these certainly is the withdrawal of state support from vocational education. While there is merit to the view that vocational schools, as junior colleges, should be financed jointly by the state and local districts, we question the wisdom of abrupt abandonment of a program which has filled a gap between public school and university education. It would be preferable for the Legislature to establish policy relative to financing of vocational education, as well as junior colleges, and then if the decision is to make a change in policy give these institutions and their interested districts time to adjust to that new policy.

Certainly also the proposal to cut back the Extension Service and Experiment Station at Utah State Agricultural College should be closely examined, as in fact should the governor's entire spending recommendations for our institutions of higher learning. Although they do, as he said in his message, represent book increases, they are considerably below requests and may not meet needs. While approving the proposed increased appropriation for the Tourist and Publicity Council, we believe taking the money from the motor fuel fund represents a diversion of money which ought, in fairness and in need, be expended on improved highways, which will attract tourists every bit as much as will advertising and publicity. This diversion may only open the door to far more serious and extensive diversion.

Generally, we would go along with the governor in resisting inauguration of new services, but we believe the approach should be one of a questioning rather than a closed mind. We agree also that automatic spending without regular legislative or executive review and supervision is dangerous.

The governor's budget contemplates a very considerable rate of expenditure. Probably in no case, however, is it as generous a rate as those directly concerned would wish. Yet there are decided limits to Utah's ability to finance state services of all kinds. It is the challenging, the difficult, and the often onerous, task of the governor and the Legislature to determine the amount the state can afford to spend, and divide it fairly among many needs. May they work together earnestly and amicably to do that task well in the overall public interest.

We commend the governor for a generally very realistic and constructive approach to Utah's financial problems for the next two years.

OPPOSES GOVERNOR'S PROPOSAL

Leader Hopes Vocational School to Operate

Special to The Tribune
PROVO—Wilson W. Sorenson, director of the Central Utah Vocational School, expressed confidence Wednesday the Utah State Legislature would "continue the school" despite the fact Gov. J. Bracken Lee eliminated appropriation for the institution in his 1955-57 biennial budget.

Gov. Lee, in his first message to the Legislature, proposed shifting of financing the Salt Lake and central Utah area vocational schools from the state to the local level.

"WE ARE STILL faced with the possibility that the school will have to close its doors," Mr. Sorenson declared, "if the Legislature fails to provide funds for our operation."

The vocational school director said local school districts would be unable to handle the extra financial burden.

Supt. J. C. Moffitt of the Provo School District said he believed the vocational school could not be operated by local school districts "without substantial aid from the state."

Mr. Sorenson said, if the Legislature sets up a vocational school district encompassing the entire area served, the Provo institution would have to be supported by four school districts, "none of which are in a position to accept the added financial burden."

ALPINE, PROVO, Nebo and Wasatch School Districts would be involved.

A tentative breakdown of contributions needed from each of the districts to operate the school showed Alpine School District would have to shoulder the heaviest financial burden by supplying $105,273. Nebo's share would total $60,321, while Provo and Wasatch Districts would be asked to contribute $38,262 and $12,000 respectively.

Two Millions Slashed Off Utah's Budget

Legislature to Get $48,134,538 Appropriations Bill

Utah's Joint Appropriations Committee slashed more than two million dollars from its tentative figures Friday and agreed upon an appropriations bill to be introduced in the Legislature late Friday.

The appropriations bill will ask for $48,134,538 from the state general fund, which now includes sales tax receipts. This compares with $51,072,000 which had been requested by departments and institutions.

Believed Record

This is believed to be an all-time high in appropriations from the state general fund which now includes sales tax revenue. Other appropriations are made by statute from earmarked revenues.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee had recommended a budget of $46,124,000. (This figure did not include an appropriation for vocational schools. The appropriations committee figure does.)

The appropriations committee in an executive session Friday had slashed heavily from the proposed appropriations for the University of Utah, the Utah State Agricultural College and the two vocational schools.

U. Figures Cut

The U. of U. now is to receive $6,812,500, including $606,500 earmarked for deferred maintenance of buildings. This compares with a tentative figure of $7,222,505 previously agreed upon by the appropriations committee. The school had asked for $7,624,840. Gov. Lee had recommended $6,313,500.

The U. of U. College of Medicine is to receive $900,000, a cut of $25,000 over a previously agreed figure. Gov. Lee had recommended $898,000 and the college had asked for $949,923.

UTAH HOUSE GETS BILL ON VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

A bill to create vocational school districts in Utah was introduced Tuesday in the House of Representatives.

The measure would create one such district in Salt Lake County, and include the present Salt Lake City, Granite, Jordan and Murray School Districts.

The other district would include the Provo, Alpine and Nebo School Districts in Utah County.

Under terms of the bill, the state would pay one-third of the costs and the other two-thirds would be borne by the local school districts.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee, who has recommended local control for vocational schools, said he would approve such a proposal. The governor said he was most interested in getting the vocational schools under local control, rather than under the State Board of Education.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Clair R. Hopkins (R-Vernal) and Reuel E. Christensen (R-Ephraim).

vey conducted by the U. of U. College of Mines was cut back to $25,000, which was the governor's recommendation.

U S A C Suffers

The new figure for the U S A C is $4,125,000, including $466,910 for deferred maintenance previously included in a separate bill. Gov. Lee had recommended $3,885,000, compared with the college's request for $4,177,410.

The U S A C extension service is to get $600,000, compared with $636,074 previously approved by the appropriations committee, $500,000 recommended by Gov. Lee and $680,600 requested by the college. The experiment station at U S A C was trimmed from $885,900 previously agreed up to an even $800,000. The college had asked for $920,900, which Gov. Lee slashed to $650,000 in his recommendation to the legislature.

The college of Southern Utah Branch of U S A C is to receive $510,000, including $75,000 for deferred maintenance. The appropriations committee previously had set $540,370 as a tentative appropriation to C S U, compared with the school's request of $547,870 and Gov. Lee's recommendation of $470,500.

Snow Unchanged

Snow Junior College is to receive $275,000, which is the same as the governor's recommendation. The school had asked for $314,846.

The Salt Lake Area Vocational School appropriation was set at $300,000, compared with $390,800 requested by the school and approved tentatively by the appropriations committee at its earlier meetings.

The Central Utah Area Vocational School, Provo, appropriation was set at $300,000, compared with $402,892 requested by the school and approved previously by the appropriations committee. Gov. Lee had recommended no appropriations for the two vocational schools. He asked the legislature to turn the schools over to the local boards of education.

14 Practical Nurses Wait S.L. Graduation

Fourteen graduate practical nurses will receive pins and diplomas at commencement exercises at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School Friday at 8 p.m.

The 14 nurses who have completed a year's work at the school will receive pins and diplomas from Mrs. Margaret C. Howard, R.N.

A welcome address will be given by Jay L. Nelson, vocational school president. Dr. Phillip B. Price, M.D., will deliver the commencement address. Musical numbers also will be presented.

A reception will follow the exercises.

The graduates are Lucy H. Black, Sylvia Incauragarat, Johanna Jaxt, Mae Rose Jones, Elsie Kastler, Jennie K. Mink, M. Bernice Quarve and Geraldine Veatch, all of Salt Lake City, and Joy Golding, Wellington; Jeraldine Henrikson, Murray; Jill Jensen, New York City, N.Y.; Susan Maddocks, Midvale; Willie Schrader, Dallas, Tex., and Pearl W. Taylor, Moab.

School to Award Diplomas at Feb. 11 Services

Diplomas and pins will be awarded to 12 practical nursing students during graduation ceremonies Feb. 11 at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 6th East.

Delivering the commencement address will be Dr. Phillip B. Price, professor and head of the department of surgery, University of Utah.

Jay L. Nelson, SLAVS president, will make an opening speech, and awards for completion of the one-year course will be presented by Mrs. Margaret C. Howard, director of practical nursing.

Eligible to take the state practical nursing licensing examination, the graduates have received clinical experience in Salt Lake hospitals, in addition to nursing theory classes at the school.

The candidates for graduation are: Mrs. Lucy Black, Mrs. Sylvia Incauragarat, Miss Johanna Jaxt, Miss Mee Rose Jones, Mrs. Elsie Kastler, Mrs. Jennie K. Mink, Mrs. Pearl W. Taylor and Mrs. Geraldine Veatch, all of Salt Lake City; Miss Joy Golding, Wellington, Carbon County; Mrs. Jeraldine Henrikson, Murray; Mrs. Jill Jensen, New York City, and Mrs. Susan Maddocks, Midvale.

Audit Lists $208,224 as '54 Vocational School Monies

Tuition, fees and miscellaneous collections at Salt Lake Area Vocational School for the biennium ended June 30, 1954, totaled $208,224.42, an audit of the facility showed Monday.

The audit report, released by State Auditor Sherman J. Preece, also showed that refunds and transfers aggregated $8,131.22.

Major recommendation in the report concerned methods of handling refunds. It proposed that henceforth all receipts collected by school authorities be deposited with the state treasurer, except for student body fees, which are not state funds. Refunds should be made through the state finance department, the auditor recommended.

5. ARE THE BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT ADEQUATE?

The buildings, formerly a laundry, require considerable modification before they will be fully adequate as a school. This has been partially accomplished and should be completed within four years.

Much of the equipment which was transferred to Salt Lake Area Vocational School from the old Salt Lake Adult School is obsolete. School shops need $180,000 worth of equipment. The Area Board of Control recommends that this be purchased at the rate of $20,000 per year.

6. IS TRADE TRAINING IN AREA SCHOOLS ECONOMICAL?

Consolidation of trade training in area schools eliminates the need for it in each of the many school districts, thus effecting a tremendous savings to the state.

High school industrial arts courses are exploratory in nature and are not comparable with a trade and industrial training program. The cost of trade and industrial equipment as well as scheduling and other problems would make trade training in the high schools extremely costly and difficult.

7. WHAT ARE THE OBJECTIVES OF THE TRADE SCHOOL?

- To prepare people to earn a living in the skilled trades.
- To provide related training for apprentices—it is required by law.
- To provide advance training for skilled craftsmen.

Ruling Limits Lee, Agencies

By GLEN SILCOX

Third District Court Judge Martin M. Larson Tuesday issued an opinion sharply curtailing powers of the governor, Board of Examiners and Finance Commission over funds appropriated for public school purposes.

The decision was a result of court action originally brought by the University of Utah against the board of examiners. The State Board of Education, interested in that suit, intervened and asked the court to define its power or authority with respect to the board of examiners and the Finance Commission.

Judge Larson concluded that "(1) The board of examiners does not have authority to disapprove disbursement by the State Board of Education of funds appropriated for public school purposes; (2) The governor and Finance Commission do not have authority to reduce appropriations made by the Legislature for public school purposes; (3) The Finance Commission does not have authority over the employment of experts or specially qualified personnel by the Board of Education; (4) In conflicts between the Board of Education and any other state department or agency represented by the attorney general's office, the board may employ independent legal counsel;" and "(5) The authority of the Finance Commission over appropriated funds is ministerial."

The issues between the University of Utah and the defendants have already been determined by the court. In Tuesday's decision Judge Larson concerned himself only with issues between the Board of Education and the board of examiners and State Finance Commission.

Gov. J. Bracken Lee, when informed of the decision, said the case will go to the State Supreme Court for a final decision.

Utah's Budget Feels Knife Of Legislators

Tentative Allotments Cut In Drive for Final Bill Draft

By CLARENCE BARKER

Tentative budget allotments for state departments felt the sharp knife of Utah legislators Thursday as they fought to draft a final appropriations bill.

Sen. Frank M. Openshaw (R-Salt Lake), chairman of the joint appropriations committee, said the group will meet Friday at 9 a.m. and have a final bill ready for introduction Friday afternoon.

Subcommittees of the powerful appropriations committee already have pared nearly a million dollars from departmental requests of $51,072,000. Gov. J. Bracken Lee recommended a budget of $46,838,000.

Legislative Rules

Legislative rules call for introduction of the appropriation bill on the 40th day. Taxation measures are considered after the appropriation figure is determined.

Both houses of the Legislature are being asked to forego Friday morning sessions in order to leave appropriation committee members free to complete their jobs.

Meanwhile Thursday, Sen. Merrill K. Davis (R-Salt Lake), chairman of the Utah Legislative Council, announced that the council will meet Friday at 8 p.m. to consider proposed new taxation bills. This session will immediately precede the appropriations committee session.

Advises Members

Rep. Lawrence B. Johnson (R-Rich) advised appropriation committee members at the Thursday meeting not to resist cuts in proposed allotments.

"If we recommend a budget 5 per cent below the governor's figures we will be realistic," he declared.

Sen. Rendell N. Mabey (R-Bountiful) countered that he would resist strenuously any over-all cut of 10 per cent or thereabouts in budgets for institutions of higher education.

"These cuts," he said, "would make our investigations a waste of time. We must decide whether we want to maintain our state institutions or drop them."

Poses Question

Sen. L. Rulon Jenkins (D-Plain City) posed the question of what salary increases should be allowed. He said five per cent increases had been tentatively fixed for some institutions, while Weber College was asking for a 10 per cent salary increase to resist competition in obtaining its faculty member services by outside groups.

Sen. Openshaw replied that

the State Finance Commission has salary schedules set up for the different institutions and resents strongly interference by the Legislature in establishing different standards.

"If we do change salaries we should establish levels which are comparable for like institutions," Sen. Openshaw added.

Sen. Davis said that proposed allotments to vocational schools are "too high to be realistic. These measures face a certain veto," he said, urging immediate action to cut them down.

"I think there can be a cut made at both vocational schools," Sen. Luke Clegg (R-Provo) added. He said he would consult with the Utah County delegation before proposing a reduction in the Central Utah Vocational School allotment.

Rep. John W. Rowberry (D-Tooele) reported that he had found state institutions he had visited in "dire circumstances."

Time Is Now

"We have gone several years without any state property tax levy and I think it is time we raised some money for our institutions," he added.

Sen. Openshaw proposed several means of establishing a better book balance" for the appropriations. He said steps are now under way to provide deferred maintenance funds for institutions for higher learning through the reserve building fund rather than by direct appropriation.

He suggested that the deferred maintenance (repair) measures refer top priority among building measures. He also suggested that $331,000 for the State Tax Commission be taken from the uniform school fund rather than from the general fund.

Unfavorable Report

The committee reported out unfavorably House Bill 186 which would appropriate $10,000 for a sight consultant for the adult blind. It reported out without recommendation House Bill 229 which would appropriate $45,000 for psychiatric and mental health treatment at the state prison.

The committee referred out without recommendation a Senate bill which would appropriate $115,000 to the University of Utah to pay employer retirement fund contributions for the present biennium.

Sen. R. Clair Anderson (R-Manti) suggested increasing junior college tuition fees from the $17 a quarter present fee to $25, the same fee charged by the Utah State Agricultural College.

House Approves 1955 Funds Bill

By Patrick R. Eckman
Tribune Political Writer

The 1955 general appropriations bill, calling for expenditures of 48 million dollars in unearmarked funds during the next two fiscal years, breezed through the Utah House of Representatives Friday shortly after its introduction by the appropriations committee on the 40th-day deadline.

It is about 2 million dollars above the recommendations of Gov. J. Bracken Lee and 3 million dollars below departmental requests.

Rep. Jaren L. Jones (R-Salt Lake), appropriations co-chairman, said the bill would permit a 4 million dollar capital construction program for the coming biennium and—assuming passage of tax measures which would raise an estimated 4½ million dollars more revenue—reduce the state property tax for the uniform school fund to about 6 mills a year.

Represents Total

The 48 million dollars is out of the general fund as newly defined under the "unearmarking" of sales taxes. It represents what in former budgets would have been the total of the general fund and emergency relief fund outlays.

In addition, the bill contains still-earmarked appropriations over which the Legislature has no direct control.

Rep. Jones' financial resume was based on appropriations committee figures indicating a 55 million dollars yield for the general fund (about two million dollars higher than the governor's estimates), which would leave a seven million dollar average to "play with." About ½ million dollars of that balance will come off the top in deficit appropriations for the current biennium and some small special appropriations in bills now before the Legislature.

A 4 million dollar building program (out of 15 million dollars in requested construction) would leave 2½ million dollars to slip into the uniform school fund, leaving that much less property tax necessary.

The building program will come later in a separate bill, but the committee has set the 4 million dollars as an informal target. It has not, however, decided whether that figure would include the $2,130,000 emergency school building bill which has passed the House and will be taken up by the Senate Monday afternoon.

Two-Year Period

The school fund will be something over 19 million dollars short over the two-year period. The 2½ million dollar surplus, plus the 4½ million dollar potential tax increase (through increased corporation franchise tax rates, closing income tax loopholes and dropping sales tax exemptions) would reduce the shortage to about 12 million dollars, or 6 million dollars a year.

Practically all of the difference between the governor's and the appropriations committee's budgets came on educational institutions. One major item was $300,000 each to Central Utah and Salt Lake Area Vocational schools, for which the governor recommended eliminating state funds.

The governor's recommendations were adopted, for the most part, on the junior colleges, but the University of Utah and Utah State Agricultural College were given about $500,000 more each.

However, the university and college took heavy cuts in a last-day trim which reduced the general fund budget 2 million dollars from the committee's tentative figure of Thursday.

The final figures included $6,812,500 for the university, of which $570,000 would be restricted for special maintenance; $900,000 for its medical school and $25,000 for its geological and mineralogical survey.

USAC is scheduled for $4,125,000, of which $425,000 is restricted for maintenance, plus $600,000 for its extension division and $800,000 for its experimental station.

IN ALL, HIGHER and vocational education receive a 16½ million dollar bite out of the general fund, about a 2.7 million dollar increase over the last biennium. Welfare and welfare institutions account for over 23 million dollars more, an increase of about 1.8 million dollars.

About $500,000 was "saved" in the general fund by transfers to other funds. Included in the transfers were $149,000 for the Tourist and Publicity Council, to come out of gas taxes, and $332,000 out of the uniform school fund for the State Tax Commission's collection expense.

The latter switch caused some lifted eyebrows in the brief House discussion of the bill, but committee members explained that the assessment will conform to the policy on other funds collected by the commission.

Most of the limited House debate was in the form of protests from members who were not on the appropriations committee and wanted the week end to study the bill.

More seasoned legislators, however, explained that it would be nearly unprecedented to open up the bill on the floor, and urged immediate passage to "avoid lobbyist pressure," and also to assure adequate time in which to act if the bill runs into any line item vetoes.

In the end, only one negative vote was cast in protest to the "hurry," although several voiced their uneasiness.

Lee, Solons Close on Funds Bill

Nearness of Plaus Hints Approval Without Warfare

By O. N. Malmquist
Tribune Political Editor

The Utah Legislature and Gov. J. Bracken Lee, often at odds on state spending, appear close enough together this year to assure passage of the 1955-57 appropriations bill with little or no battling over vetoes.

The biennial appropriations bill, introduced and passed Friday by the House and which undoubtedly will be approved by the Senate without change, exceeds the governor's budget recommendations by about two million dollars. But the difference between the legislative budget and the gubernatorial recommendations is less than the figures indicated.

Most for Schools

Approximately $1,725,000 of the difference is accounted for by the proposed appropriations to the University of Utah, the Utah State Agricultural College and vocational schools. The appropriations bill would give the two institutions of higher education one million dollars more than the governor recommended.

The bill would appropriate $600,000 to the area vocational schools in Salt Lake City and Provo and $125,000 to the State Board of Education for vocational education. The governor recommended no state appropriation for these three items.

Voiced no Ban

But while the governor did not recommend specific state appropriations for vocational education, neither did he recommend discontinuance of the program. He advocated that the vocational schools (and the junior colleges) be financed on a district basis with state aid. Thus, by implication at least, he accepted the idea of the state financing part of the vocational educational costs.

Inasmuch as little chance of passage is seen for bills to create junior college or vocational school districts, the governor may be willing, and could with consistency, go along with the Legislature on the vocational appropriations totaling $725,000.

From the standpoint of the Joint Appropriations Committee, which hammered out the general appropriations bill of some 48 million dollars, the gov-

See Page A-10 Column 5

The Problem of Vocational Education

The question of what Utah should do relative to vocational education looms large before the current session of the Legislature.

In his budget recommendations for the next biennium Governor Lee proposed that state financial support for the two area vocational schools, in Salt Lake City and in Provo, be completely eliminated, and that the state appropriation which, with federal funds, has financed supervision of vocational education throughout Utah under the direction of the State Board of Education be also eliminated.

This latter proposal continues a downward trend in financing vocational education supervision from a $171,000 appropriation in 1949 to $150,000 in 1951, to $125,000 in 1953, to nothing in 1955. Elimination of state support for the area vocational schools would cut $285,000 a biennium for each out of the budget.

Vocational education is far from new in the state of Utah. Brigham Young advocated such training nearly a century ago. There has been a certain amount of agricultural and crafts training in the schools for many years. Since 1917 the federal government has encouraged agricultural, trades and homemaking instruction. Original small amounts of federal aid under the Smith-Hughes Act ($37,000 a year for the entire state initially) have expanded under the George-Dean and George-Barden Acts of $172,000 a year, with support of distributive education training and vocational counseling added.

Today we have vocational education of various kinds, and at various levels of education, starting with junior high school industrial arts and homemaking classes and running up to junior college training in a number of technical fields. Agriculture is taught in 50 high schools and at Weber College. Homemaking is taught in 80 high schools and 75 junior highs. Industrial arts instruction is given in almost every junior and senior high school. Distributive education is taught in 14 of the larger city high schools, and trade and industrial training is given in the junior colleges, the area vocational schools and in Vernal and Jordan high schools.

In addition to the vocational training of school-age youths, there are many evening classes for adults. All told there are some 39,000 enrolled, with some 750 teachers, in various kinds of vocational education programs. All of this activity is supervised in greater or lesser degree by the Vocational Education Division under the direction of Mark Nichols, with eight full-time persons on the staff.

For all the extent of the program, however, its estimated total cost to the state of perhaps a million and a half dollars is a drop in the bucket of the many millions spent for public school and higher education.

Some vocational education has long been under fire as an improper school function. Teaching girls to cook, for instance, has been attacked on this ground. Secretarial training has been criticized as a duplication of private school function and the teaching of printing, for example, has been attacked as an unnecessary substitute for the apprenticeship system. On the other hand proponents claim that the youth who seeks to be a mechanic has as much right to tax-supported training as his friend who wants to be an engineer; or the barber as much as the physical education teacher; the watchmaker as much as the lawyer.

Truth is we have not decided in Utah just where we ought to go in vocational education. We have not established a firm policy on such training. We do not know at what level it should be given. We have not decided if it should be integrated into existing educational systems or become a new system outside either the public schools or the colleges.

These questions ought to be answered. But we are not answering them effectively and intelligently with a meat-ax treatment of chopping off state support. Perhaps state support should be discontinued. But if it is, it ought to be based on a careful appraisal of the system as it exists and the place, if any, that vocational education ought to fill in our educational system of the future.

We earnestly suggest such a study to the Governor and the Legislature so that the 1957 Legislature can deal intelligently with this vocational education problem.

Lee Gives Okeh To Finance Bill

Legislature Overrides Veto On S. L. Water Levy Bid

By Arthur E. Tholen
Tribune Staff Writer

Gov. J. Bracken Lee Tuesday signed the 48 million dollar general appropriations bill and vetoed two alcoholism control measures while the Legislature overrode one of his earlier vetoes and sustained him in another.

The Senate upheld the governor's veto of a bill to prohibit price advertising in the sale of eyeglasses and joined with the House of Representatives in overriding his veto of a measure to permit Salt Lake City to continue a special four mill levy for water and sewage improvements.

The governor's action on the compromise appropriations act was anticipated in most quarters. But it was an unprecedented action considering his attitude toward the three previous appropriations bills of his administration. The major veto battles of preceding Legislatures have been precipitated by appropriations measures.

Alcohol Measures Lose

The latest vetoes of the current legislative session applied to a brace of bills which would have substantially increased the state's appropriation for the control of alcoholism. One called for an appropriation of $50,000 a year from the state's general fund to the State Board on Alcoholism. The other, a companion measure, would have boosted the annual liquor permit fee from 50 cents to $1.

The House made the vetoed alcoholism bills a special order of business for Wednesday at 2 p.m.

In signing the appropriations act providing for allocations some two million dollars above his budget message recommendations, the governor was mildly critical of the Legislature's failure to adopt his proposal for a joint financing arrangement for junior colleges and vocation schools.

Commended Committee

But in general he commended the joint appropriations committee of the House and Senate for coming up with "an excellent measure." In the House, Rep. Jaren L. Jones (R-Salt Lake), co-chairman of the appropriations committee, responded to this commendation by noting the committee's task had been made easy by the "good budget" the governor had proposed.

The additional two million dollars provided for in the appropriations act above the governor's recommendations will go to institutions of higher learning and to the state's voational education program. The governor had recommended these monies be taken from the uniform school fund.

On an across-the-board basis, the appropriations for the 1955-57 biennium will be approximately five million dollars higher than those of the current biennium ending June 30.

"As I pointed out in my budget message," the governor said in signing the appropriations bill, "costs are bound to increase in future years. It is necessary, therefore, that we look beyond this biennium and well into the future in considering all proposed expenditures.

"IT WAS FOR THIS reason that I proposed adoption of a joint financing arrangement for our junior colleges and vocational schools. Such an arrangement would have relieved the state of part of the heavy load it is carrying to support vocational and higher education. I would have preferred to see the Legislature adopt such a program, but since it has not, I am willing to accept the present appropriations bill.

The governor warned, however, that the time is coming when the state will have to trim its services to fit available revenues. "There is a limit on the amount of taxes the people can pay," he said. "The people cannot be expected to pay higher and higher taxes as the years go by."

The Senate's action on the optical bill, which the governor vetoed Thursday, had the effect of killing the controversial measure.

Proponents of the measure were able to muster only 14 votes, two short of the necessary two-thirds majority, to override the veto. All nine senators voting to sustain the veto were Republicans. Of the 14 voting in favor of the bill, seven were Republicans and seven Democrats.

Principal arguments in favor of overriding the veto were offered by Sen. Elias L. Day (R-Salt Lake City) and Sen. Carl D. Gibson (D-Price). Sen. Day bolstered his argument with a letter written by Dr. Charles Ruggeri Jr., president of the Utah State Medical Assn., endorsing the measure.

The Senate vote to override the governor's veto on the 4-mill levy bill was as decisive as Monday's vote in the House. The count was 20 in favor of the measure and three against, with the opposition coming from three Republicans, Sens. B. H. Stringham, Vernal; Grant S. Thorn, Springville, and Dilworth H. Woolley, Salt Lake City.

BY VIRTUE of the House and Senate action on the bill, Salt Lake City may continue to apply the special 4-mill levy for water purification and sewage treatment improvements without voter approval.

In vetoing the bill for an annual $50,000 general fund appropriation to the State Board of Alcoholism, Gov. Lee agreed there was merit in objectives of the bill. But he questioned the advisability of enlarging "this or any other state activity" at a time of economic stress.

The companion bill to double the liquor permit fee was designed to raise additional revenue for the general fund to finance the appropriation.

CONSTRUCTED BY STUDENTS

Vocational School to Display House

An open house will be conducted Sunday from 1 to 10 p.m. in a home built almost entirely by some 20 students of Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East. The structure is on ground adjacent to the school. In construction since October, the house has five rooms and one bath. Size of the home is 26 by 35 feet, with 910 square feet of floor space.

Building trades instructors Joseph S. Johnson and Stanley D. Jones supervised the project. Last year a similar home was constructed and sold for $6,575. The present house will be sold on bid May 18. Bids are to be submitted to the Utah State Department of Finance, said Jay L. Nelson, school president.

STUDENTS performed all the construction labor except for electrical wiring, installation of plumbing fixtures and a small amount of sheet metal work

S.L. Vocational School Board Persuades Delay in Land Sale

Members of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School board of control Tuesday persuaded the State Board of Examiners to defer possible sale of state-owned property located at from 602 to 628 E. 4th South. The property includes three old homes which are badly in need of repair. The examiners previously had authorized Secy. of State Lamont F. Toronto to obtain an appraisal on the most profitable means of utilizing the 4th South St. frontage. Werner Kiepe, appraiser, reported to the examiners that the property was worth $60,000 for commercial purposes. Mr. Kiepe recommended that the state send no more money for repairs and maintenance of the existing homes. Dr. J. O. Jones, chairman of the school board of control, said the property was badly needed for future expansion of the school and could be utilized for the present as a parking area. The examiners agreed to consult Atty. Gen. E. R. Callister on the matter and to give it further study.

Nurse Project Job Filled For School

Appointment of Mrs. Ruth Mumford Smith, 31 E. Girard Ave., as chairman of the practical nurses' advisory committee, Salt Lake Area Vocational School, was announced Wednesday by Jay L. Nelson, president.

Mrs. Smith was with Utah Health Department several years before becoming health education consultant with the U.S. Public Health Service, Washington, D.C. She is secretary of Utah Congress of Parents and Teachers.

DESERET NEWS 5/27/55 Develop Skills, S.L. Speaker Tells Grads

Students at Salt Lake Area Vocational School were urged to develop their own skills and abilities at annual accomplishment exercises held Thursday night.

They received the advice from Howard B. Gundersen, assistant director of industrial relations, Kennecott Copper Corp., who was program speaker.

Certificates were issued to 84 students who have finished two-year courses at the school.

Mrs. A. C. Jensen, State Board of Education; Mrs. Allan M. West, representing the Women's Legislative Council, and Mrs. Ruth Mumford Smith, chairman of the school's practical nursing advisory committee, were honored for outstanding contributions to the school.

Two scholarship awards were presented by the Salt Lake Kiwanis Club to Eldean V. Kingston, tailoring student, and Dee L. Grose, electronics student.

S.L. School to Show Miniature Homes

Homes in miniature, thoughtfully planned and artistically constructed, were on display at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School this week.

The colorful display homes, eight in all, were constructed by students and teams of students in instructor T. Burdell Tenney's drafting class as part of a contest to plan a home to be built during the next school term by the school's carpentry class.

The class builds a home each year on school property at 4th South and 6th East as a part of its instruction program.

The model constructed by Kenneth Woods was judged the outstanding entry.

The drafting class at the vocational school is a two-year course. At the end of the course all students will be placed in employment, Mr. Tenney said.

Graduation Speaker Cites Technician Need

Students completing two-year courses at the Salt Lake Area Vocational Training School were told Thursday evening their technical training is in greater demand than ever before.

Speaking at exercises for 115 students receiving certificates of accomplishment was Howard

B. Gundersen, former president of the school and present director of industrial relations, Kennecott Copper Corp.

Greetings were extended by Dr. Cecil O. Samuelson, state director of guidance services. Student response was by Edgar R. Turner.

The Salt Lake Kiwanis Club presented scholarships to Dee L. Grose, an electronics student, and Eldean V. Kingston, tailoring student, the first girl to receive one of the scholarships. The presentations were made by Dr. Jean C. Flint.

Honored for outstanding contributions to the school were Mrs. A. C. Jensen, member of the State Board of Education; the Women's Legislative Council, represented by Mrs. Allan M. West and Mrs. Ruth Mumford Smith, newly appointed chairman of the practical nursing advisory committee.

A special trophy was presented to Byron D. Hancock, selected as the outstanding apprentice of the year by the Utah Manufacturers' Assn.

Old Prison to Figure In Firemen School

A helicopter, a state prison, a college professor and the Utah National Guard are scheduled to be on hand during the 11th annual Firemen's Training School to be conducted Thursday through Saturday in Salt Lake City.

Fire department officials announced that the annual training feature will open Thursday morning with welcoming addresses at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

ACTIVITIES FOR the score of visiting firemen will expand Thursday afternoon with lectures at the vocational school and with an "all out" civil defense fire fighting demonstration at the Air Base Village training grounds.

For the Civil Defense classes, said Assistant Chief Don E. White, there will be first aid, a helicopter to demonstrate evacuation from an area of conflagration and Utah National Guardsmen to show how.

ON FRIDAY, the entire contingent will converge on the old Sugar House Prison site, scene of a recent "real fire," where for half a day, fire fighting techniques will be demonstrated on the already scorched walls.

During a Friday afternoon session, the schedule is a convict's dream: "Complete Involvement of Old State Prison by Fire."

Lectures on fire prevention and a quick course in how to train firemen will mark the closing of the school sessions Saturday.

Edward C. Larson, industrial teacher trainer, Weber College, Ogden, will instruct local and visiting firemen on how to train other firemen.

ARSON ON PURPOSE—Firemen Kent Davis and Roy Hardy brush up on fire-fighting techniques which will be demonstrated Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 11th annual Firemen's Training School in Salt Lake City.

Deseret News, June 15, 1955 Firemen Training Study Set at Old Utah Prison

The old state prison at 21st South and 14th East will "go up in smoke" Friday.

Salt Lake City firemen will set the fires.

It's all part of the 11th annual Firemen's Training School sponsored by the Salt Lake City Fire Department.

The department expects to demonstrate all the latest fire-fighting techniques during the burning, which is scheduled from 9 a.m. to noon.

The demonstration will be a feature of the training school which opens Thursday and continues through Saturday. Classes will be held 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

There will be four divisions of instruction, said Capt. D. E. White, program director. These are (1) industrial fire protection, (2) civil defense rescue training, (3) water supply, and (4) an instructor training course for firemen.

Capt. White said some 500 firemen, insurance men and others from throughout the mountain states will attend the school.

DESERET NEWS—6/17/55 Friday 500 Firemen Attend School

The largest number of firemen ever to attend the annual firemen's training school sponsored by the Salt Lake City Fire Department Saturday termed this year's sessions "the best ever."

More than 500 fire fighters registered for the 11th annual school which wound up Saturday noon.

Friday the visiting firemen watched buildings at the old Utah State Prison site go up in smoke, as part of a demonstration of new fire fighting techniques.

Saturday's sessions, held at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, stressed a community program for life safety and fire prevention. Capt. F. E. McKinnon of the Fire Prevention Bureau was the speaker.

Edward C. Larsen, industrial teacher trainer from Weber College, conducted the school, which started Thursday.

S.L. Maps 'Hot Time' for 500 Laddies

There'll be a hot time in the old town Thursday!

That's the day Salt Lake City firemen will play host to an expected 500 persons attending the 11th annual Fireman's Training School.

The school will open with registration at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, at 8:30 a.m.

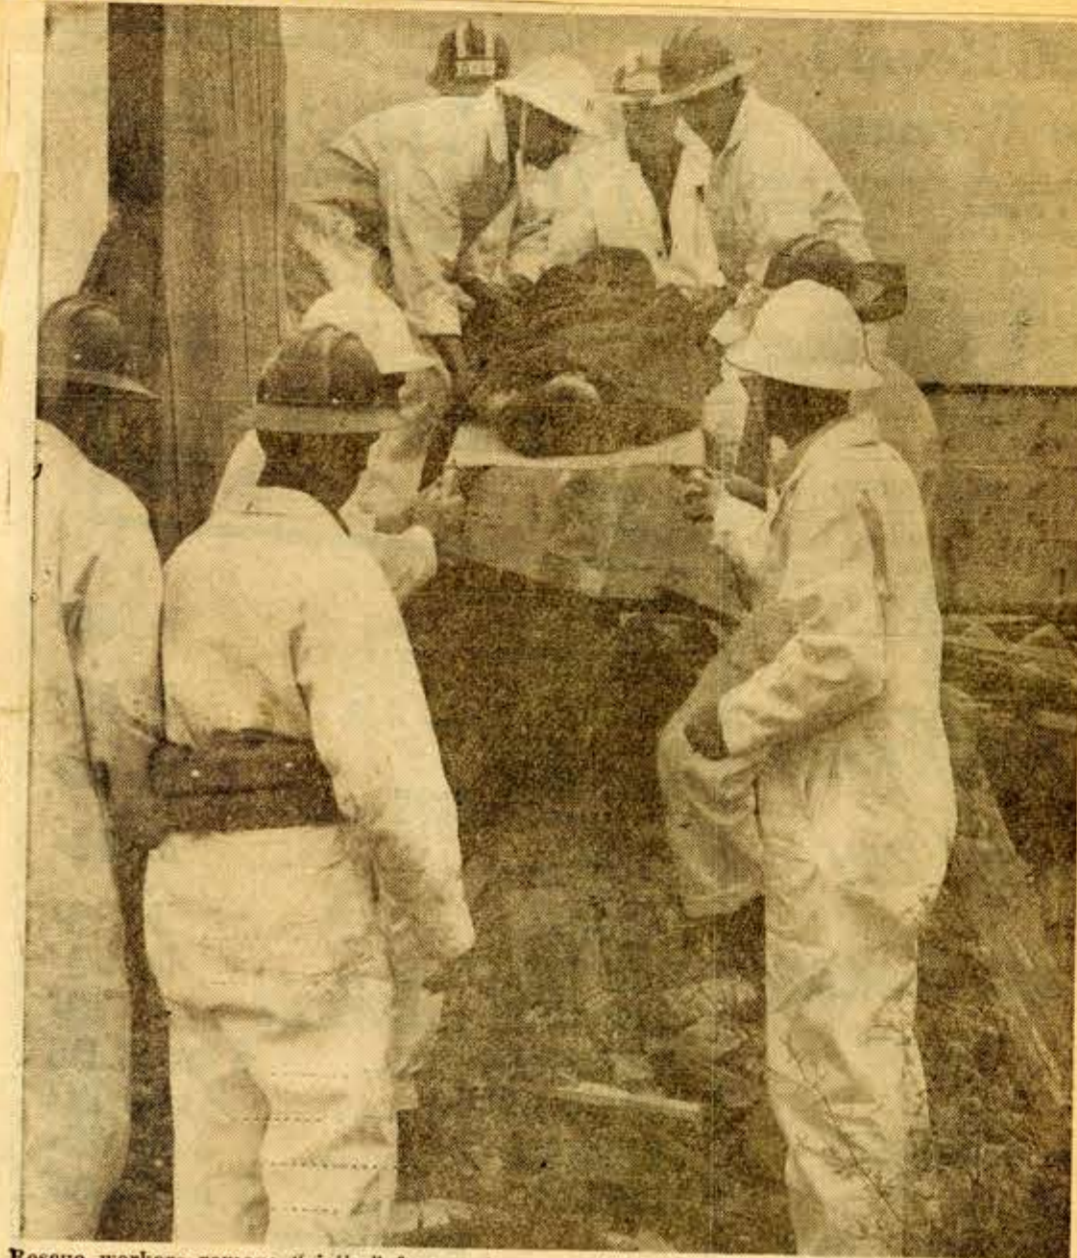

Highlighting afternoon activities will be a civil defense fire fighting demonstration at the Air Base Village training grounds.

Featured at the civil defense classes will be use of a helicopter as a method of rescue and evacuation from a critical area.

The school, which continues through Saturday, will be held at the old Utah State Prison site in Sugar House Friday where visitors will be shown use of ladders in fire fighting.

The day's sessions will wind up with "complete involvement of the old state prison by fire" the school program showed.

Saturday session will be devoted primarily to lectures on a community program for life safety and fire prevention and instructor training courses for firemen.

Rescue workers remove "victim" from ruins of building during demonstrations at Firemen's Training School. Events also included evacuation of injured by Army helicopter.

FIGHT FIRE WITH FIRE

Firemen attending the 11th Annual Firemen's Training School get real fire-fighting experience and instruction Friday morning on a "first floor fire" deliberately set in the old state prison at 21st South and 14th East. The demonstration was staged by Salt Lake City Fire Dept. The entire prison building was scheduled to be set afire in a "complete involvement" demonstration Friday afternoon.

Firemen Swing Into Action As Training Class Starts

"Broken bodies" littered Air-base Village civil defense training grounds Thursday afternoon as the 11th annual Fireman's Training School opened despite occasional showers.

The "bodies," of course, were part of a demonstration, but realism was the keynote.

HIGHLIGHTING the afternoon activities was the appearance of a Utah National Guard helicopter in a demonstration of rescue and evacuation from a disaster area.

More than 300 persons attended various sessions of the school, which was sponsored by the Salt Lake City Fire Department.

Classes also were held at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East. The meet will continue through Saturday.

FRIDAY'S sessions will be staged at the old Utah State Prison site in Sugar House, where use of ladders in fire-fighting will be demonstrated.

A climax to the day's training will be "complete involvement of the prison by fire."

DURING the past year Local 19 of Salt Lake City, Utah had over one-third of its membership attending school in apprenticeship training and journeyman training classes. Our apprenticeship program was run as prescribed by the UA. Our journeyman training involved two welding classes, one in gas and one in electric, and a control class conducted by eleven different control manufacturers.

The control manufacturers are: Johnson, Service Co., Robert Shaw Co., General Controls, White Rogers, Mercoid Controls, Minneapolis Honeywell, Detroit Controls, Milwaukee Gas, Penn Control, Perfex Control and Bailey Control.

Impressive ceremonies Friday evening marked the graduation of 22 practical nursing students from Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

The nurses have completed a one-year course which included classes at the school and clinical training at Salt Lake County and Latter-day Saints Hospitals.

JAY L. NELSON, president of the school, and Dr. Royal L. Garff, professor of speech, University of Utah, addressed the group.

After expressing appreciation for the hospitals, teaching staff, and others who have participated in the program, Mr. Nelson saluted the achievements of the graduating nurses.

"NURSING reminds me of the eternal candle," he said. "It represents the light of leadership which keeps you in the path of service, and beckons others to follow it."

Calling the light of leadership symbolic of the very spirit of nursing, he urged the 22 graduates always to follow it closely.

Responsibility Cited at Institute

Vocational school graduates must be more than skilled craftsmen—they also must be prepared to take their places in society as responsible and productive citizens.

This advice was given to teachers at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School Thursday at their fall teachers' institute. The speaker was Dr. Don A. Orton, dean of the University of Utah college of education.

Vocational schools must teach more than mechanical skills, Dr. Orton said. They must

3 Salt Lakers Die In Head-on Crash

John Hyrum Reeve . . . Was returning from business trip.

Loren Albert Bird . . . Died in head-on highway crash.

Harry C. Brown . . . Driver of ill fated car in Nevada.

Special to The Tribune
ELKO, NEV. — Three Salt Lake City men, only occupants of two automobiles, were killed instantly Monday about 8:30 a.m. in a thunderous head-on collision 18 miles east of here on U.S. 40.

Harry Crawford Brown, 39, 679-2nd Ave., driver of one car, and his passenger Loren Albert Bird, 38, 551 Sherman Ave., were westbound and traveling at a speed estimated by witnesses to be nearly 100 m.p.h. Their vehicle careened into the left lane and struck head on the eastbound auto driven by John H. Reeve, 63, 1213 E. 7th South.

Killed Immediately

Sheriff J. C. Harris of Elko County said all three were killed immediately. Engines of both cars were driven back into the rear seats.

Sheriff Harris said Mr. Reeve apparently saw the Brown car heading toward him and pulled over as far as he could, but was blocked from leaving the road by a 25-foot embankment on either side.

The bodies were taken to Burns Mortuary, Elko.

John Hyrum Reeve was born Oct. 5, 1891, in Salt Lake City, a son of John Robert and Mae Gillette Reeve. He married Vera Cheshire June 28, 1922, in Salt Lake City.

Owner of Firm

Owner of Jack Reeve Plumbing Co., 1213 E. 7th South, Mr. Reeve was a past president of Utah Plumbing and Heating Contractors Assn., and currently was the association secretary.

He was a member of Douglas Ward, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and from 1912 to 1914 he served an LDS mission in England. He was a Salt Lake Area Vocational School plumbing instructor.

Survivors include his widow; a daughter, Mrs. Dolores R. Murdock, Salt Lake City; five grandchildren; three brothers and three sisters, Raymond C. and Sidney A. Reeve, Mrs. Earl (Ivy) Fogel, Mrs. Glen Y. (Alberta) Richards, all of Salt Lake City; Harold Reeve, Hornbrook, Calif., and Mrs. Fred (Ethel) Pohlman, Glendale, Calif.

Wyoming Native

Loren Albert Bird was born Aug. 20, 1917, in Evanston, Wyo., a son of Joseph T. and Margaret Fletcher Bird. A graduate of Evanston High School, he was a veteran of World War II.

He was an automobile upholsterer. Member of Progress Lodge 22, F. and A.M., he also was a member of El Kalah Temple Shrine and the Shriners Band. He played a trumpet in local dance bands.

He was a member of Mervyn S. Bennion Post 2, American Legion. Survivors include his mother and a sister, Mrs. Elva Stockham, both of Salt Lake City.

Parley Elects Vocational Group Chief

Fay B. Thomas, Midvale, Saturday was elected president of the Utah Vocational Assn. during its annual convention at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 S. 6th East.

Mr. Thomas is an instructor at Jordan High School. He succeeds Marie L. Williams, Tooele High School instructor, association president during the past year.

Prior to conclusion of the annual one-day conclave, Mr. Thomas voiced the hope that the coming year will see "a larger and more unified association membership which will continue to strive for the betterment of Utah's vocational students."

MORE THAN half of the association's membership of 150 attended the convention. They heard papers on trades, vocations, industrial arts, agriculture, home economics and distributive education.

The categories are those the association is concerned with and membership is composed largely of instructors in those subjects from schools in the state.

THE POST of president was the only one filled during elections Saturday. Mr. Thomas will select a secretary later.

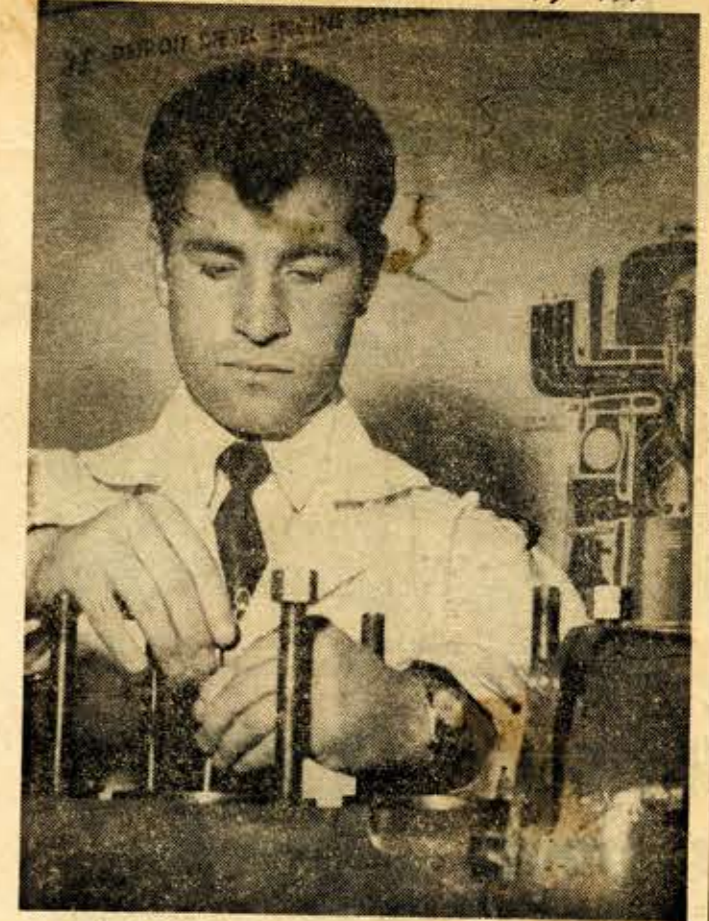

Among speakers Saturday were Gus P. Backman, executive secretary, Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, and Olin H. Ririe, assistant to the president, Utah Power and Light Co. Both expressed optimism on the future of trade and economic development of the Intermountain Region.

New Officers

Students at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, chose Melvin Buckway, 1896 16th East, a welding student, as new student body president, in recent elections, Jay L. Nelson, school president, announced Thursday.

Others elected include Lynn Anderson, Salt Lake City, first vice president; Eldean Kingston, Bountiful, second vice president; Judy Thomas, Salt Lake City, secretary-treasurer, and Marie Baxter, Salt Lake City, historian.

A handsome, brown-eyed native of Baghdad will carry American know-how and good will back to his native Iraq when he finishes a two-year training course at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

Unless he changes greatly in the months ahead he will represent a wonderful asset to America's international relations.

Safa willingly declares that "I like America very well. I like it better than any other country. This is a good school. I have good instructors and the people are wonderful."

Safa was born in Baghdad Dec. 20, 1934, into a family of five sons and one daughter. His father worked as manager of a clothing factory in Baghdad.

His brother, Salah Al-Bayati, an outstanding student, received a government scholarship to attend school at the Utah State Agricultural College, Logan. He has made a fine record and will graduate this year in aeronautical engineering.

Because of the splendid work Salah has done at school in America the family sacrificed and sent Safa to America also. He is taking a two-year course in diesel mechanics.

According to his instructor, F. L. Walters, Safa is a brilliant student and is doing exceptionally well. He also is learning English as he learns diesel repair and he always has an Arabic-English dictionary within reach when he attends class.

When he says he likes America "better than any country," Safa is talking from wide experience. He says he has also visited in London, France, Italy, Egypt, Palestine and other Middle Eastern countries.

Before he returns home he wants to add another skill to his list—he wants to learn to pilot an airplane.

Supervisor Safety Class Opens In S.L. Tuesday

Acceptance Increased
DECEMBER, 1955

Reports from the Department of Business Regulation indicate that during recent months some 56 cities and 7 counties have adopted as part of their own local ordinances the Plumbing Mechanical Code recently adopted by the state. An effort is presently being made to bring all other areas under the same code. This unification has been largely the effort of Jerry Budd, who has worked diligently with city and county officials to bring about the action necessary to adopt the code as a part of existing ordinances. Salt Lake County has announced that the state code will become part of an ordinance governing the industry of plumbing effective January 1, 1956.

Present plans call for the appointment of two plumbing inspectors for that area. In order to completely unify state efforts in the universal adoption of the existing code, Mr. Budd is working in conjunction with the Department of Business Regulation and the Salt Lake Area Vocational School to conduct a 12-week course for plumbing inspectors.

To Attend Special Training School

Utah's Chief Plumbing Inspector announced recently the organization of a 12-week training program, designed to acquaint plumbing inspectors concerning their responsibility under the presently adopted state code and to brief them on technicalities concerning not only the mechanical requirements, but enforcement. Listed below is the 12-week outline that will be presented to some 65 inspectors expected to attend. The training program will be conducted in the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 South 6th East, at 10:00 a.m. each Saturday beginning January 14 for 12 weeks. Co-sponsoring the program are the State Department of Business Regulation and the Salt Lake Area Vocational School. Tuition for the entire course will be $5. All plumbing inspectors in the state of Utah will be eligible to enroll, whether employed by the state, the counties or the cities. Mr. Budd, chief inspector, along with M. G. Ericson of Salt Lake City and George Madron, will be responsible for directing and instructing the course. Other qualified personnel, along with a considerable collection of films, will be used to handle the curriculum.

Older Woman Wants Work Opportunity

By MARY MARKER
Dear Mary Marker:
I am a widow 40 years old and am wondering what I can do to be self supporting. It is not so easy to get jobs at my age, I am told.
I have very little income and have two children in high school and junior high. Fortunately, they are responsible and trustworthy and want to help out as much as they can. Can you help me?

Wondering.

Dear "Wondering":

I should think it would pay you to have a profession in hand. Your chances of permanent security are better if you have special training for something.

Have you thought of practical nursing? I find that the Salt Lake Area Vocational School is about to start a new class in nursing right away. It begins Monday, Feb. 13, with one week of orientation, and instruction beginning the following Monday.

Enrollees should have had two years of high school work. However, one may take aptitude tests and perhaps qualify, even if this condition is not fulfilled. I think you could arrange to borrow what would be necessary for a course of this kind. After four months you would be earning. The course is open to women from 18 to 50 years of age, and some even beyond 50 qualify and are accepted.

During the first four months the student receives instruction and practice in the nursing of different age groups. The student also studies homemaking in the family living unit, including meal planning, nutritional studies, budgeting, and caring for small children and older people.

This work is followed by six months of clinical experience in the Latter-day Saints and the Salt Lake General Hospital. This practice covers the care of medical, surgical, maternity, and pediatric patients. Here the practical nurse begins to earn and the amount coming in lowers her outlay considerably.

Nursing is one of the most satisfying of professions. One works with people, and that means a great deal to most women, especially widows. And having skill to help others who are suffering gives one a sense of being needed and useful that is good for the personality.

Practical nursing is today also a well-paid profession. Since the supply is considerably below the demand, one may feel sure of employment. If you have average health, you can probably count on at least 25 years of regular employment.

Many of our readers do not realize that this area vocational school might solve their problems, or their family's. It does a most important service in this area, and other areas also, for its graduates are in great demand.

It is most efficiently managed and each department offers the highest quality of instruction. Its enrollment in day and evening classes is about 350 and all the instructors are experienced and highly qualified.

There is an unusually fine esprit de corps, and a graciousness and feeling of happiness throughout the school. Teaching human relationships is part of the work and one feels that the school puts the theories into practice in all departments.

In each class, the students themselves learn to meet the public. Also they take their turns as managers, receptionists, cleaner-uppers, and in being responsible for many other duties.

Courses are offered in architectural drafting, auto body repair and painting, automobile mechanics, barbering, business practice, cosmetology, diesel mechanics, electricity, machine shop, radio and electronics, tailoring and fashion design, welding, cutting and metal fabrication.

Interested people may telephone the school for information and are also welcome to visit.

M.M.

Vocation School Graduates
13 Practical Nurses Friday

Thirteen graduate practical nurses will receive diplomas and pins Friday at 8 p.m. in graduation exercises at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

The nurses have completed a one-year course at the school. They have studied nursing theory classes at the school and have received clinical and practical experience at LDS Hospital. They now are eligible to take the state licensing examination for practical nurses.

Dr. Cecil Samuelson, assistant clinical professor of educational psychology at the University of Utah, will be the principal speaker. Diplomas will be presented by Mrs. Martha Parrish, clinical instructor. Mrs. Shirley Collins, course director, will present the pins.

A short welcoming address will be given by Jay L. Nelson, school president.

The graduates are Miss Mary Ann Hietberg, Miss Shirley Ann Unsworth, Mrs. Cecilia L. Beringer, Mrs. Ann Van Syen, Mrs. Vera Whitehead, Mrs. Josephine Walno, Mrs. Frances L. McClelland, Joy Christopher and Mrs. Mary Fuller, all of Salt Lake City; Mrs. Blossom R. Schwab, Green River, Wyo.; Mrs. Julia A. K. Asplund, Murray; Mrs. Agnes Holgate, Monroe, and Mrs. Lucie Kerr, Bountiful.

Dr. Cecil O. Samuelson, assistant professor of educational psychology and counselor for terminal students, University of Utah, will address the graduates. Diplomas will be awarded by Miss Martha Parrish, clinical instructor, and pins will be presented by Mrs. Shirley Collins, course director.

Nursing Program Gets Director At Vocation School

Mrs. Camilla S. Wood, 2825 8th East, has been named director of the practical nursing program at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

The appointment was announced Wednesday by Jay L. Nelson, school president.

Mrs. Wood is a native of Salt Lake City. She attended Irving Junior High School and South High School and studied at the University of Utah. She taught practical nursing at the vocational school from 1951 to 1953.

In addition Mrs. Wood has served as house supervisor and as head nurse at Salt Lake General Hospital and as staff nurse and day supervisor at Fort Douglas Veterans Administration Hospital.

A new class in practical nursing will begin under Mrs. Wood's direction Feb. 13 at the vocational school.

Mrs. Wood is the wife of Kirk DeMar Wood. The couple has four children.

TRIBUNE 4-5-56

State Postpones Adopting Utah U. Budget Controls

Adoption of new budget controls over the University of Utah was deferred by the State Board of Examiners Wednesday pending completion of a records check by State Auditor Sherman J. Preece.

The auditor was asked for his recommendations at the last examiners' meeting after the Utah Supreme Court held that the university is subject to their budgetary controls and supervision. His inspection of financial records has not been finished.

Screening Committee

Gov. J. Bracken Lee suggested to the other examiners, Secretary of State Lamont F. Toronto and Atty. Gen. E. R. Callister, that the board consider asking the university's board of regents to appoint a screening committee for out-of-state travel requests with an eye toward overall reductions.

In other business, the examiners approved deficit requests by the State Fair Board and the Utah Water and Power Board.

The latter was granted $15,000 to defray legal costs of protecting Utah's rights in the Arizona-California litigation on the Colorado River.

$120,000 Grant

The fair board was granted $120,000 for modernization of the electrical distribution and water supply systems at the state fairgrounds and an additional $12,000 to reimburse the State Road Commission for work done at the fairgrounds in preparation for the 1955 fair. Another $15,000 for relocation of the auto racing track was denied.

A request for $15,000 for essential repairs at Salt Lake Area Vocational School was returned so the request could be signed by all members of the school's board of control.

J. O. Jones, chairman of the board of control, said the school's renovation needs would total $300,000 but would be "throwing money down the drain."

The board feels, he said, that instead $15,000 should be spent on "stop gap" repairs and that the 1957 Legislature be asked to appropriate funds for a new building.

tribune 4/9/56

Trade School Past Repairs, Board States

The Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, is so "inadequate and antiquated" that to try to renovate it "would be throwing money down the drain."

This was stated in a letter to the State Board of Examiners by Dr. J. O. Jones, chairman of the Area Board of Control for the school.

Repairs that are essential if the school is to continue to function in buildings now occupied will cost about $300,000.

Offers Alternative

But because of the age and inadequacy of the structures, the Area Board of Control feels it would be "throwing money down the drain" to spend such a sum, he said.

Instead, Dr. Jones said, the Board of Control has another plan:

"First, to accomplish only stop-gap emergency maintenance projects and complete only critical repairs needed to hold the place together."

Asks Estimate

"Second, to employ an architect to draw plans for a new building. Present quarters could be occupied until a portion of the proposed building is completed. As sections of the new building are finished, the old one could be abandoned."

The Board of Examiners asked the State Building Board for an estimate of what repairs at the school would cost, and also referred the matter to the State Board of Education to make an official request for a deficit appropriation if it sees fit.

New Building Declared Need Of S.L. Area Vocation School

Present buildings of the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East, are "inadequate and antiquated" and should be replaced.

J. O. Jones, chairman of the school's board of control, had made this recommendation Thursday in a letter to the State Board of Examiners.

Mr. Jones said repairs and renovations to the present structures would cost an estimated $300,000.

He recommended that the state employ an architect to consult with school officials and prepare plans for a new building on the present campus.

J. G. King, construction superintendent for the State Building Board, inspected the school properties March 22nd, Mr. Jones reported.

"Following his (Mr. King's) tour of the plant with our committee, he stated that it would be economically unsound to spend large sums on such inadequate and antiquated buildings," Mr. Jones wrote.

The board chairman recommended that the examiners appropriate $15,000 to take care of critical repairs. He suggested further that the present quarters could be abandoned as sections of the new building are completed.

The state purchased the present vocational school properties in 1951 for approximately $350,000.

The main building had been occupied for many years by the old Troy Laundry. Two of the present school buildings had been used by the laundry for garages. One of these formerly had been a stable in the days that laundry wagons served Salt Lakers.

State Approves Deficit Funds For Fair Grounds

A deficit appropriation of $120,000 for deferred repairs and maintenance at the Utah State Fair Grounds was allowed Wednesday by the State Board of Examiners.

The money will be expended on a schedule approved by the State Building Board and the State Fair Board.

Work to be done includes modernizing the electrical distribution system, installation of new water supply lines and repairing roofs.

The examiners also approved a deficit appropriation of $12,000 to the State Board Commission for clean-up and repair work it had done preparatory to the last state fair in September, 1955.

Consideration of another deficit appropriation request from the Salt Lake Area Vocational School was deferred because the request was not signed by all board members of the school as required by law.

J. O. Jones, chairman of the vocational school's board of control, reported that $15,000 is needed for "stop gap" repairs at the school.

Panel To Look Over Recreation Problems

BOUNTIFUL — Needed recreational facilities of the Bountiful area will be discussed at a public meeting Thursday at 8 p.m. The meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Stoker School. It is sponsored by the Bountiful League of Women Voters and will feature a panel of four recreational program specialists.

The panel will be moderated by E. Lamar Parkin, principal, Stoker School. Members of the panel will include Stephen J. Beeley, training coordinator, Salt Lake Area Vocational School; Dr. Calvin S. Smith, former member, Salt Lake County Recreation Board; Leo Pignaneli, Salt Lake City supervisor of recreation facilities, and Dr. John L. Squires, University of Utah associate professor of health, physical education and recreation.

If residents wholeheartedly support the meeting, leaders from civic, church and school organizations have pledged support to the league for organizing a many-faceted recreational program in the area.

The public meeting will climax a study of the area's recreational problems conducted by the league as their main study project this year. Through the meeting, they hope to bring the growing problem to the attention of the public then let the residents and civic leaders carry on from there, according to Mrs. Charles W. Cram, chairman of the meeting.

Assisting Mrs. Cram on the recreation meeting committee are Mrs. William S. Sorrell, Mrs. Robert Porter, Mrs. Ronald W. Johnson and Mrs. Walter T. Wilson.

Students To Sell 'Homemade' House To Bidder

The Salt Lake Area Vocational School will put a "homemade" house on the auction block Sunday.

The attractive redwood house on the corner of 4th South and 6th East will be opened for public inspection Sunday at 1 p.m. It will remain on display from 1 until 10 p.m. each day through Sunday, May 20.

May 23 at 10 a.m. the house will be sold to the highest bidder—unless bids received are considered too low.

Student Designed

The four-room house really is quite special. It is the product of the ideas and the manual skill of students at the vocational school. Last year students in the drafting class entered a competition to design the project house. A design worked out by Kenneth Woods was accepted and the drafting class of 1955, T. Burdell Tenney, instructor, prepared the house plans.

This year students in the carpentry class, instructed by Joseph Johnson, built the house on skids on the school grounds. All work except plumbing, heating and wiring has been done by students.

The house is strictly modern in design with an attached carport and storage area. It has two 12x12-foot bedrooms, a 14½ x18-foot living room, kitchen, dining area and a bath and one-half. It has a built-in combination radio and inter-communication system with four outlets inside and one outside.

Must Move House

The buyer of the house must move the structure at his own expense and must apply a built-up roof after the home is located. The carport can be detached for moving.

While it is on exhibit the house will be completely furnished. The furnishings will not be sold with the house but the carpets and drapes will be included in the bid price.

Jay L. Nelson, president of the vocational school, says the total cost of the house to the school, including materials and all work that had to be contracted is $6,527.

The school builds such a house each year in order to give students practical experience in actual construction. Mr. Nelson says the project has proved very successful in providing a means of making the trades instruction more worthwhile.

Bids on the house must be submitted to the State Department of Finance, State Capitol Building, Salt Lake City.

STUDENT-BUILT HOUSE—Students at Salt Lake Area Vocational School put final touches on house they built as training project. House will open for public inspection Sunday.

Graduation Speaker Named

MARLON S. BATEMAN

Marlon S. Bateman, training director for Utah Power & Light Co., will speak at graduation exercises at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

Ninety students will receive certificates of accomplishment at the exercise, Jay L. Nelson, school president, announced.

Special recognition also will be given Mrs. Belle S. Spafford, president of the Relief Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; Clyde W. Simpson, lieutenant governor, Utah-Idaho District, Kiwanis International; Eldean V. Kingston, tailoring and fashion design student, and James O. Barlow, apprentice plumber and evening student at the school.

Honored for Work

Mrs. Spafford will be recognized for her inspiration and support of the nursing program at the school, Mr. Nelson said. Mr. Simpson is being recognized for support given by Kiwanis, especially in the scholarship program, Mr. Nelson said.

The two students have done outstanding work at the school.

Mr. Bateman is a graduate of the University of Utah. He is a member of the board of directors of the American Society of Training Directors, president of the Temple Quarry Chapter of the Sons of the Utah Pioneers and clerk of the Mt. Jordan Stake of the LDS Church.

Vocational School Honors Mrs. Spafford

The Relief Society and its president, Mrs. Belle S. Spafford, received special recognition Tuesday at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School accomplishment exercises.

A citation presented to Mrs. Spafford said:

"The Relief Society reaches out through its many activities and in many ways touches the lives of most of us. It would be difficult to think of an organization nobler in purpose than the Relief Society. In its every activity, the Relief Society is designed to encourage people to think and act positively and to conduct a continuous and comprehensive program of community improvement.

"Here at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School we have benefited directly from the participation of members of this great organization on our advisory committees.

"The Relief Society has also staunchly supported the school by referring many worthy and able people here for training.

In the practical nursing program alone, dozens of our students have reached this school through referrals by the Relief Society."

Also receiving special recognition at the exercises were Eldean V. Kingston, a tailoring and fashion design student; James Olsen Barlow, apprentice plumber and evening student, and Clyde W. Simpson, lieutenant governor, Utah-Idaho District, Kiwanis International. Mrs. Barlow accepted the citation for her husband who was unable to attend.

Tribune 5-28-56 Vocational Program

Marlon S. Bateman, training director for Utah Power and Light Co., will speak Tuesday during accomplishment exercises of Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431-6th East.

The program is scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m.

Talks and music by students will be Mr. Bateman part of the program and certificates will be presented by Dr. J. O. Jones, chairman of the area Board of Control, and Jay L. Nelson, school president.

"Give full effort on your job, but also recognize the value of outside interests. "Service clubs, churches, community enterprises of all sorts offer us the chance to become better individuals." So stated Marlon S. Bateman, Utah Power & Light Co., in adressing the Salt Lake Area Vocational School accomplishment exercises Tuesday night.

Mr. Bateman said people must recognize the value of humility, avoid complacency and exhibit a proper concern for the well being of others.

"Frequently we need to take a backward glance so that we may appreciate where we have been. We should often take a forward look to be ready for the challenges that lie ahead.

"Take hats off to the past, coats off to the future and set your sights on the highest goal that you may realistically hope to achieve," he admonished.

Four persons received special recognition at the exercises. They were Mrs. Belle S. Spafford, president of the Relief Society, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; Clyde W. Simpson, lieutenant governor, Utah-Idaho District of Kiwanis International; Eldean V. Kingston, tailoring and fashion design student, and James O. Barlow, apprentice plumber and evening student.

Firemen Of 5 States Attend Meet In S.L.

Firemen representing counties, cities and towns from five western states were present Thursday morning at the opening session of the 12th annual Salt Lake City Fireman Training School.

More than 300 full-time and volunteer firemen registered at the three-day school being sponsored by the Salt Lake Fire Department in cooperation with the Utah State Board For Vocational Education.

Fire fighters from Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, California and 80 per cent of Utah counties registered, according to assistant fire chief Don E. White, program director.

Mayor Adiel F. Stewart welcomed firemen to Salt Lake at the opening session held at Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 431 S. 6th East.

During the three-day school, practical demonstrations as well as classroom instruction on theory and principles of preventing and suppressing fires will be discussed.

As part of the school, visiting firemen will tour and inspect the Utah Oil Refinery Plant and the Utah Poultry and Farmers Co-operative plant.

The oil plant tour conducted Thursday afternoon featured a demonstration of oil tank fires extinguished by air agitation.

During the Friday morning session, the Salt Lake Fire Department will demonstrate operation of its new 100-foot ladder.

$143,000 Allowed To Repair Schools

Des. News
8-3-56

Utah's Board of Examiners Friday granted deficit appropriations totaling $143,000 for school construction repairs and matching funds.

Of this, $93,000 will go to the State Board of Education to enable it to award contracts for two emergency school building projects.

The Panglitch Elementary School will receive $32,000 and the school at Enterprise will receive $61,000.

The Salt Lake area Vocational School received $20,000 to complete urgent repairs and minor remodeling recommended by the State Building Board. Included in this project will be replacement of the main water line to the school, installing retaining walls and chain link fencing all around the south area of the school and replacing certain drop-cord lights with fluorescent light fixtures.

The board also granted $30,000 deficit appropriations to the Vocational Rehabilitation department.

Dr. L. B. Harmon, director, reported that an additional $53,933 in federal funds will be made available by the state appropriation.

Vocational rehabilitation work will be speeded at the Provo Hospital, the American Fork Training School, the State Tuberculosis Hospital and in other areas, he said.

By a 2 to 1 vote, the examiners declined to grant a leave of absence with 80 per cent pay to Calvin Sudweeks, sanitary engineer for the State Board of Education.

Mr. Sudweeks had planned to attend Harvard School of Public Health Sanitary Engineering for one year.

State Ups Pay Of 88 Employees

The Utah Board of Examiners enjoyed a field day Friday passing out money.

It granted wage increases to 88 state employees in course of a 2½-hour-long meeting.

The increases were granted in nearly every department upon recommendation of the state committee on wages.

The increases were moderate. The examiners also approved a revised schedule of wages for personnel at the State Hospital at Provo.

Some of the increases covered faculty members at Carbon College and at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School.

State Poll Shows Favor For Vocational Classes

Tribune
8-5-56

By Robert W. Bernick
Tribune Business Editor

A survey of business, labor and educator groups in Utah shows an overwhelming opinion that trade and industrial education should be expanded.

Mr. Bernick A committee of a state survey group on vocational education in trade and industrial occupations polled, through Research Services, Inc., some 250 educators, 200 businessmen and industrialists and 50 labor leaders.

This group, headed by M. D. Hammond, Utah Oil Refining Co. official of Salt Lake City, disagreed on several approaches in the questionnaires they answered.

But in total, some 68 per cent said too little trade education was being provided in the state.

About 88 per cent of the labor representatives voiced opinion that such type education should be expanded. Seventy-two per cent of the educators took the same position.

58 Per Cent 'Vote' Sees Expansion Need

Representatives of business and industry "voted" 58 per cent on this score. But 19.2 per cent of the businessmen did not answer this question. Twenty-one and 20 per cent, respectively, of educators and business representatives said they felt the present amount of education was "about right."

Having "agreed" on the need for more industrial and trades education, those polled were asked which methods they approved best for financing such a program.

Thirty-four per cent of the educators, 23 per cent of the labor people and 27.2 per cent of the business representatives approved a "combination of state appropriation and local tax levy."

Labor seemed to favor (38.5 per cent) a direct appropriation by the Legislature for this purpose. Thirty-two per cent of the teachers also approved this plan.

The industry answers split 18 per cent each between this method and a "combination of industry and public funds."

School District, Tax-Industry Aid Favored

Some 16.8 per cent of the industry spokesmen approved a local school district tax levy for the program. Eleven per cent of the industry representatives favored a combination of school district tax levy for a joint program, a plan reported to be the pattern in states east of the Missouri River.

The survey showed that industry generally doesn't think present programs conducted variously by the state and in local schools—where such teaching exists at all—is very effective in meeting the requirements of employers.

Only 40 per cent of the business people felt the programs as now constituted were adequate in this regard.

Fifty per cent of the labor group and 60 per cent of the teaching group rated the industrial education system at present as "fairly effective."

There's little disagreement over the proposal that both labor and industry should have representation on the governing boards of publicly supported vocational schools.

Query Seeks Improvement Suggestions

The group was asked: "Which of following ways do you think the trade and industrial education programs in Utah can be improved?"

Educators favored providing more information to the public, as did labor and—to lesser degree—business and industry.

The business group seemed to believe (66 per cent) that a better liaison between vocational schools and industry was needed.

It is interesting to note that 43 per cent of the teachers, 55½ per cent of the labor leaders and 23 per cent of the industry representatives believe additional equipment and tools should be provided vocational and trades schools in the state.

In general, all three groups felt that all intelligence levels of students might be exposed to the trades education program. But 11 per cent of the industry group and 4 per cent of the teacher group felt that the programs would best suit below-average students.

(Nearly 5 per cent of the educators felt that above-average students should enter trades and industrial training.)

State Board Control Favored for Program

Some 69.7 per cent of those answering the questionnaires said the Utah State Board of Vocational Education should be primarily responsible for conduct of trades and vocational education.

Labor was overwhelmingly in favor of this plan. Only slightly more than half (56 per cent) of business agreed. Three-fourths of the educators favored the state setup.

One-third of the business and industrial group felt local school districts should make provision for this type of education.

Two-thirds of those polled stated, however, that they were virtually unfamiliar with the state's program in vocational education.

Like so many surveys on public problems, this one shows that something needs be done. But there is some disagreement as to how.

In a rapidly industrializing Utah there seems to be no question of why.

PRACTICAL NURSING

The Department of Practical Nursing opened in September, 1948, under the direction of the State Board for Vocational Education and the Area Board of Control. The department is approved by the State Nursing School Accreditation Board of Review, and the National Association of Practical Nurse Education.

One year is required to complete the course in practical nursing. Training includes 16 weeks of extensive class work at the Salt Lake Area Vocational School, 32 weeks of clinical experience at the L. D. S. Hospital, the Salt Lake General Hospital and the Primary Children's Hospital, and 4 weeks of vacation.

Each student must complete 1780 hours of class work and clinical experience to qualify for a certificate. Graduates must pass the state examination to become a licensed practical nurse.

The licensed practical nurse is helping to relieve the critical nursing shortage by giving bedside nursing care in hospitals, and assisting in homes, doctor's offices and clinics. Approximately 90% of our graduates are currently employed in the local hospitals.

A new class in Practical Nursing begins every four months--February, June and October of each year.

"A trained Practical Nurse is a person prepared by an approved educational program to share in the care of the sick, in rehabilitation and in the prevention of illness, always under the supervision of a licensed physician and/or a registered professional nurse."
